Vote for Repeal Today To End Dry Era Dec. 6; M'Kee, LaGuardia, Even

Billion Revenue Seen for Nation

Elections in 6 States Watched for Signs of Political Trend.

By Elliott Thurston.

Six States vote on repeal today, making certain the end of the eighteenth amendment by December 5 or 6, while various State and municipal elections, notably New York's triangular mayoralty battle, involving the fate of Tammany Hall, will give the politicians their first clews to the drift of public sentiment since the avalanche of 1932.

Anticlimactic though the long foreshadowed repeal of prohibition is, its accomplishment will mark the end of the dry era, beyond all possible doubt, and hence suggest a jubilation to which the administration will lend only a restrained approval, inasmuch as the Government and leading wets are turning now to counseling temperance. That was a dominant note in the radio speech which Jouett Shouse, chief spokesman for the organized repealists, delivered last night.

Billion in Taxes Foreseen.

He exhorted the voters to make repeal unanimous; foresaw a possible revenue of a billion dollars a year from taxes—much more, incidentally, than Treasury experts count on; repeated that a "legalized, regulated industry" will supplant "an illicit racket," and then denied that there will be a "period of chaos following repeal such as our dry friends have attempted to depict." All but 19 of the 48 States will still have local prohibition, he pointed out, and of the 19 States, prospectively wet after December 5, 11 have already enacted control legislation and steps toward control are under way in the rest.

As the wet leader he again urged control and declared that "it becomes incumbent upon us to resume the teaching of temperance in America."

Repeal, though it will be listed by the Administration as redemption of the party platform pledge and hence as a party achievement, is of less moment to the White House than the outcome in New York, or the trends that may be disclosed by local elections elsewhere.

Power in Balance.

Victory for independent Democratic candidate Joseph V. McKee will make the White House happy, for, though President Roosevelt has preserved the outward neutrality expected of the Chief Executive, Postmaster General Farley has left no doubt, by his actions and his open declaration for McKee, that the Roosevelt administration wants McKee installed in Manhattan's city hall, where in 1934 and 1936 he would be highly valuable in holding the pivotal vote of New York in line for the party in power.

Conversely if Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the fusion candidate, wins, the Republicans will proclaim it a setback for the administration. Mr. Farley's denials will be branded as alibis. The Republicans will have high hopes of reclaiming New York's electoral votes in 1936, which

Ritchie Scores Bay Bridge Aid

Federal Finance Plans Held Contrary to Public Interest.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—Albert C. Ritchie tonight announced his opposition to the construction of a Chesapeake Bay bridge under the proposal of the Federal Government for aid in financing the project.

Gov. Ritchie revealed his position in a statement, saying he thought "the public should be informed upon the important features of the plan and should understand and consider certain of the Government's requirements, which strike me now as objections from the standpoint of the public interest."

He said he had been advised of the proposal of the Public Works Administration, whereby the Government would provide $8,500,000 for the work, of which $2,550,000 would be an outright grant toward labor and material.

The remaining $5,950,000, he said, would buy 15-year four per cent bonds of "the Chesapeake Bridge Public Corporation" designed as a State agency, secured by tolls on the bridges, with operation, maintenance and insurance also to come out of the tolls.

NRA Demands Fair Practices In Stocks Code

Wall Street Regulation Sought as Limited Draft Is Rejected.

Acting through the NRA, the administration yesterday demanded of Wall Street a code of fair practices which will closely regulate certain phases of stock gambling and eliminate some of the abuses revealed by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

The intentions became apparent when NRA Division Administrator A. D. Whiteside, who is president of Dun & Bradstreet, at a hearing sharply criticized the proposed code presented by investment banking houses and ordered them to again review it so as to include some trade practices.

The trade practices which he particularly desires incorporated in the code would apply especially to the "over-the-counter" market in unlisted securities and "over-the-counter" methods used by Albert H. Wiggin, former president of Chase National Bank, for the bank stock sales which brought him to the attention of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

90-Day Delay Given.

Later, at a seven-hour conference of Deputy Administrator C. N. Weisiger, jr., and executives of the Investment Bankers Association who are sponsoring the code, the code was revamped, the advisability of raising the minimum wages and shortening the maximum hours was considered, and the bankers were given 90 days in which to present fair trade practices. Further hearings then will be held.

Officials declined to state what would be the nature of the practices. When asked if they might include limitation of profits to avoid abuses on the "over-the-counter" market, an NRA executive replied: "I don't know." He characterized the bankers' association men as "among the finest people in America," however, and said he felt sure the trade practices which they will draw up would give adequate protection both to investors and to themselves.

New Curbs Planned.

Simultaneously, it was revealed that the Federal Trade Commission contemplates taking a hand in the

Tammany Drive Ends in Flourish

Farley Makes Only Bare Mention of Election in Radio Plea.

By Frank Getty.

New York, Nov. 6.—From the chilly, windswept marquee of a Broadway showhouse, from cozy cubicles in radio studios, from scores of noisy trucks spouting red fire and roman candles and from the platforms of a dozen school houses, New York City's mayoralty candidates and their running-mates flung their final challenges and appeals for votes tonight.

Although the weather is expected to be cold and raw, more than 2,000,000 voters will render the verdict tomorrow. Mayor John P. O'Brien, candidate of Tammany, who is expected to be swept from office and succeeded by either Fiorello H. LaGuardia or Joseph V. McKee, chose Broadway for his final effort tonight, speaking to a noisy throng which jammed the streets around the Criterion Theatre.

LaGuardia, Republican Fusion candidate, who is held by the betting fraternity and keen political observers to be most likely to win, stuck to his intention not to make any further addresses, but his backers and others on the Fusion ticket were out in force in every part of the city.

McKee in Whirlwind Finish.

McKee was speeding from one rally to another through the Borough of Queens tonight, indicating, according to some observers, a decline of confidence on the part of Recovery party leaders.

Less important among the evening's utterances, in the opinion of politicians still hopeful that McKee can win, was the address of Postmaster General Jim Farley over the radio.

Farley, who was making an appeal on behalf of Democratic candidates throughout New York State as well as for the Recovery slate here, spent the evening working on his speech and it was not completed until an hour before he was to go on the air.

Farley Disappoints.

Then, to the disappointment of the McKee group, the Postmaster General hardly mentioned the local election.

After declaring local government the paramount issue in the State election, Farley concluded:

"Because I believe that you will believe me when I say that we will sincerely promote the cause of reorganization of local government, I am asking you to go along with us in thus crusade for good government. Nobody can deny that I have ever stood for anything except efficiency and economy in government.

"I trust that our sincerity of purpose will cause you to go along with us tomorrow and to give us full opportunity for attaining the aim we are promoting by electing Democratic Assemblymen and Democratic local officials.

"I know of no better way of proving to every one how sincere I am than to state frankly to you that it is because I feel that the only way we can secure honest and efficient government in my own city, is to support here, the same as I am asking to support up-State, those can-

Car Wreck in Canada Injures D. C. Priest

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 6 (AP).—The Rev. Father C. J. McNiel, Washington, D. C., and Meddie McNiel of Oshawa, Ont., were slightly injured near here today when their automobile struck an obstacle and turned over.

Father McNiel's hip was bruised and his companion, driver of the car, received a scalp wound.

Duce Seeks 5-Power Parley With U. S. to Reduce Arms

Rome, Nov. 6 (AP).—The possibility that Premier Mussolini will call a meeting of four European powers and the United States to consider the disarmament stalemate was seen here today after Il Duce and Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German minister without portfolio, had an hour conference.

Gen. Goering, who arrived by airplane today, and the premier talked about disarmament, recovery in the Danubian area and Austria.

The conversation on disarmament was said to have revolved around the method to reopen the arms parley.

Mussolini was understood to have sounded out Gen. Goering on what concessions Germany is willing to make in her demands for "equality in arms."

It was considered likely the Italian premier will make no move to invite any conference until after November 12, when Germans will vote on the Nazi foreign policy.

Pope Pius is said to be preparing an encyclical charging that the German-Vatican concordat is not being properly applied.

Goering arranged to have another long interview with Mussolini tomorrow morning.

Berlin, Nov. 6 (AP).—The second visit of Reichsminister Hermann Wilhelm Goering to Rome in recent weeks was said in informed circles today to be connected with difficulties between the Holy See and the Prussian government concerning the appointment of a bishop in Berlin to succeed the late Bishop Schreibu.

Gen. Goering's choice for the post is Dr. Wilhelm Berning, Bishop of Osnabrueck, an able Nazi, while the Vatican is said to favor Prelate Wolker of Duesseldorf, the head of the Catholic Youth Organization.

Keep Hands Off, Soviet Tells Japan

Invasion of Far East Means War, Moscow Official Says.

Planes to Be Fired Upon if Flight Repeated, Tokyo Told.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Nov. 7 (U.P.). Officials of the Soviet government said today if Japanese airplanes repeat their asserted flight of yesterday over Russian territory they will be fired upon.

It was not made known, however, whether the threat was contained in the formal protest that Russian Ambassador Yurevev lodged with Foreign Minister Koki Hirota of Japan.

Moscow, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Soviet government's hope for a successful outcome of the Washington recognition negotiations and a sharp warning to Japan to keep hands off in the Soviet far east were sounded tonight by Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the council of commissars.

He spoke in the presence of Joseph Stalin, President Kalinin and other officials at a solemn meeting in the Moscow Opera House, hailing the sixteenth anniversary of the October revolution.

Molotoff declared that President Roosevelt's action in initiating discussions looking to a resumption of diplomatic relations is "one of the proofs strengthening our international position, which was attained because peace has been the keystone of our foreign policy."

Whole World Affected.

But, he went on, "the significance of the negotiations between Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff and President Roosevelt is not limited only to relations between the U. S. S. R. and the United States—but affect the relationships of the whole world.

"We can not foretell the result of the Washington discussions, but we know our foreign policy has been successful elsewhere thus far and we hope to see new successes."

Maxim Litvinoff will arrive in Washington tomorrow to start recognition discussions with President Roosevelt.

Turning to the Japanese question, Molotoff maintained that "the carrying out of our policy of peace does not depend entirely on us.

"It rests also on the plans and intentions of other countries toward the Soviet Union.

U. S. Flag Slur Laid to Cuban

Island Officials in Move to Suppress Spread of Terrorism.

Havana, Nov. 6 (AP).—An incident involving the United States flag and a spread of terrorism into the interior of Cuba resulted tonight in swift action by authorities.

Eye-witnesses said J. A. Rubio Padilla, a student leader, wiped his hands on an American flag as he boarded an airplane which carried him to Miami. It was said authoritatively the incident was immediately reported to the State Department at Washington.

Meanwhile, Col. Fulgencio Batista issued orders to the army of which he is chief to deal firmly with all discordant elements throughout the republic.

Several spectators, including Grant Mason, manager of the Pan-American Airways, whose plane Padilla was boarding, described the flag incident.

They said Padilla got aboard the ship following Carlos Prio Socarras, another student, who, with Padilla, will act as unofficial adviser of the Cuban delegation to the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo. As Padilla disappeared down the hatch, they said, he wiped both his hands on an American flag, then waved his hat to the crowd which watched from the dock.

20 Hurt in Jersey Four-Ply Collision

Burlington, N. J., Nov. 6 (AP).—At least 20 were injured, one critically, near here today as a Philadelphia-New York bus and an automobile collided and two trucks crashed into the wreckage.

An emergency hospital was set up in Burlington City Hall and all available doctors called. The only person reported in a serious condition was Miss Emma Gill, 21, of Camden, a bus passenger, who received a fractured skull and broken leg.

Ellis H. O'Dell, 32, Philadelphia, bus driver, said the automobile struck the bus and a moment later a truck with a trailer hit the wreckage.

They planned to fly to Switzerland tomorrow, but are undecided whether to stop at Paris en route.

Press Gag Rule Denied By Johnson

Opposition to Recovery Plans Attributed to Powerful Few.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said today that "the biggest imitation dead cat" thrown so far by objectors to the NRA is the one about the freedom of the press.

The Government has no intention of attempting to censor or control the newspapers, he told an audience of big business men, industrialists and financiers and could not do so even if it wanted to.

He represented President Roosevelt and the administration as being receptive to fair criticism, but declared that some newspapers have lent themselves to "witch doctor dancing" and "inciting the jitters with headlines."

Seeks to Lay Bugaboo.

"I do not believe in any restrictions whatever on the press," Johnson said. "I am now going to take an official step which I think will level this silly bugaboo forever.

"In my official opinion there is no authority in the NRA to license a newspaper. I think that the licensing sections of the statute must be read with the free press clauses of the Constitution. I think that, together, they clearly preclude the idea of any intent of Congress to create any right in the NRA to license the press."

Johnson's speech was the first of a series of six to be delivered in the corn belt, rent at present by a firm selling strike. He delivered it before 4,000 members of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

Appealing for full support of the recovery program, he said all objections raised to the national recovery act, freedom of the press, constitutionality of the recovery act and interference with private individualism were either "synthetic dead cats" or "hobgoblins."

Opposition Questioned.

He said the true grounds for opposition to the NRA were not those issues, but rather the desire of "a few powerful men * * * for the benefits of the act but none of its burdens." He said: "They want to organize and combine and escape the inhibitions of the Sherman act, but they don't want to give any-

Farm Appeal To Congress

Governors Unshaken by Roosevelt Rejection, Olson Says.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 6 (AP).—The Midwest will take direct to Congress the farm relief program President Roosevelt rejected last week, Gov. Floyd B. Olson said today.

Asserting the five governors who carried their unsuccessful plea to the White House were undaunted and, along with farmers of the area, were firm in their demands, Olson said a conference would be held soon to prepare plans for Congressional presentation in January.

Executives of other farm States will be invited, Olson added, in the hope more will be represented than at last week's Des Moines sessions, where the rejected program was prepared.

An embargo on farm products shipments may be discussed, he asserted.

He added he believed Secretary Wallace and others with whom the governors conferred in Washington to be sincere in their desire to help farm relief.

"But I believe," he continued, "they are more apprehensive as to reactions in some quarters than they are doubtful as to practicability of the plan. They are hesitant at attempting it without a direct mandate from Congress."

Yugoslav Colonel, Spy, Sentenced to Death

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 6 (AP).—Col. Louis Michich, until a year ago an active officer in the Yugoslavian army, today was sentenced to death for espionage on behalf of foreign powers.

Final Honors Paid Senator Kendrick

Sheridan, Wyo., Nov. 6 (AP).—Wyoming and the Nation paid last honors to Senator John B. Kendrick today.

From Cheyenne came Gov. Leslie A. Miller and his military staff and all State elective officers. The United States Senate was represented by a delegation from Washington. Senator Kendrick died Friday.

Private funeral services were at 2 p. m. at Trail End, home of the senator, followed by a public service at the Methodist Church and burial at Mount Hope municipal cemetery.

Wallace Asks Fair Trial For NRA in Radio Talk As Farm Strike Grows

Plea for Troops Made; Rail Span Burned, Train Attacked.

Stock Cars Seized And Cattle Freed

Courthouse Guarded; President Assailed by Reno.

Meriden, Ia., Nov. 6 (AP).—An Illinois Central Railroad bridge was flaming tonight between here and Cleghorn, presumably fired by pickets, authorities said.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 6 (AP). Militant farm strikers' burning of a railway bridge and the shooting at a freight train brought an urgent appeal for National Guard troops tonight.

Pickets on the highways were in a threatening mood. A Sioux City newspaperman was warned away by men brandishing clubs.

Sheriff Tice, of Sioux City, and Sheriff Ralph Rippey, of Le Mars, attributed the burning of a railway bridge near here to pickets. An unsuccessful attempt to burn a bridge here last week also was attributed to strikers.

Courthouse Under Guard.

At Le Mars, Sheriff Rippey had the courthouse under guard. He was warned anonymously by telephone that pickets would invade the town to retrieve flares taken from them by the sheriff and would "take care of the courthouse at the same time."

The bridge, on the Northwestern Railway 6 miles north of Sioux City, was fired shortly after pickets sought to stop a freight train there. As the train crossed the bridge, a bullet shattered a caboose window.

Mayor W. D. Hayes of Sioux City, appealed for a "full regiment" of troops today.

In Des Moines, Gov. Herring conferred with Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Grahl, but did not immediately announce his intentions. He dispatched troops to the area last spring during mortgage foreclosure riots at Le Mars and Denison.

The bridge burning followed plundering of eight carloads of live stock at Lawton, where strikers barricaded the track to stop the train.

Reno Assails President.

Advised of the turn to violence at Sioux City, Reno, strike leaders, said at Des Moines:

"These acts of violence are regrettable. The poeple have been admonished to carry on by peaceful picketing in the strike. It would perhaps be impossible, however, to prevent actions of this kind in the present frame of mind of the farmer." Earlier Reno said President Roosevelt "definitely and deliberately broke his preelection pledge to the farmers of the Nation," by refusing the program of five Midwestern governors for fixed agricultural prices.

"The President," Reno asserted, "in aligning himself with the Wallace program, has given his sanction to as contemptible an attempt to bribe the farmer with doles * * *."

Reno referred to the Administration's corn-hog and corn loan plans.

"As a consequence of the betrayal of the farmers by both the President and Secretary," Reno said, 'the farmers have but one course left to pursue, that is, to strike with all the power they possess."

Group Backs Price-Fixing.

Macon, Mo., Nov. 6 (AP).—Although voicing opposition to the Midwest farm strike, the executive committee of the Missouri Farmers' Association today unanimously adopted a resolution protesting against the Administration's action in rejecting the price-fixing plan offered by mid-Western governors.

Court to Rule On Crawford Defense Today

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 6.—Charges by defense attorneys that a caste system discriminates against Negroes in Virginia marked a hearing here today on legal moves to quash an indictment against George Crawford, Negro, facing trial for the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley and Mrs. Nina Buckner.

The defendant was guarded by 25 State and county police armed with rifles, clubs and tear gas guns. Six hundred spectators, half of whom were Negroes, filled every available seat in the court room while scores of others milled about the courthouse.

Police were stationed at all exits and mingled in the crowds. The atmosphere in the court room was tense, but there was no disorder. Crawford was spirited away to the Alexandria jail for the night in a convoy of four cars after the court recessed.

Judge J. L. McLemore, Suffolk, assigned to the case by Gov. Pollard, heard almost a score of witnesses and prolonged arguments. He announced he would hand down his decision tomorrow.

Most of the witnesses were called by the defense in efforts to prove Judge J. R. H. Alexander, of circuit court, deliberately excluded Negroes from service on the grand jury which indicted Crawford.

Judge Alexander himself—no longer officially connected with the trial of the case—was the witness about whose testimony the arguments centered.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 6 (AP).—The body of Texas Guinan, night club hostess of the Nation's headlines, will leave tomorrow morning for Broadway, 3,000 miles away.

"I would rather have a square inch of New York than all the rest of the world," she had told her manager, Eddie Baker.

Funeral services will be held at St. Malachi's Church, of which she was a member. The date has not been set.

Miss Guinan, 49, died yesterday after an operation for colitis. The body, accompanied by George Guinan, a brother, will lie in state in Chicago and New York.

Secretary Hits Selfish Group Hindering Relief Plans.

Will Bar Methods Believed Unsound

Mobs and Threats Not to Sway Government, Hints Official.

By Franklin Waltman, jr.

As additional acts of violence and new threats were reported from section of the Middle West dissatisfied with the Roosevelt recovery program, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in an address to the Nation last night made it clear the Administration would continue to resist "principles and methods we do not and can not believe in."

Although he did not refer specifically to the critical situation in the corn belt, Wallace undoubtedly had that picture in mind as he spoke. Consequently his words were regarded as expressing the Administration's determination not to be swayed by mobs and threats but to insist on a "full and fair trial" for its program.

Wallace adopted a conciliatory tone and pleaded for a fair trial of the program—NRA as well as AAA—and patience in waiting for results. He reminded farmers that the city wage earner also had a stake in the recovery program and that until wages were increased they could not pay higher food prices. The success of the farmer, he maintained, was dependent on the prosperity of the cities.

Accuses "Selfish Groups."

The agriculture chief said he was "disturbed" by the way in which "certain selfish groups have tried to get the better of one another." Business men, he continued, had tried to use the governmental powers of the NRA and the AAA "to settle ancient feuds" and "certain farm groups and labor groups have apparently tried to do the same thing."

The great bulk of the people, however, "do not belong to these warring factions," Secretary Wallace asserted, adding that "it is in behalf of this vast, inarticulate majority that public servants must continually be working."

It is possible that in this part of his speech Wallace had in mind the Farmers' National Union and the National Farmers' Holiday Association, spearhead of the agitation in the corn belt. Milo Reno, president of this latter organization, bitterly assailed President Roosevelt and Wallace earlier in the day.

The five middle-western governors who came here last week were accompanied by technical advisers attached to the Farmers' Union. This organization has sponsored the demands at first made by the governors, that farmers be given "cost of production plus reasonable profit" for their products and a provision calling for such prices was supported by the union and voted into the farm relief bill by the Senate last spring. At Wallace's urging the section subsequently was stricken.

Peek's Aid Suggested.

Due to the hostility existing between Wallace and this organization, suggestion has been made that George N. Peek, agricultural administrator, also making a speaking trip into the disaffected area, to supplement the vocal efforts of Secretary Wallace and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. The latter will speak today at Min-

Roosevelt Is Urged To Remove Welles

Havana, Nov. 6 (AP).—Julio Cesar Fernandez, editor of the newspaper Alma Mater, has asked President Franklin D. Roosevelt to recall Ambassador Sumner Welles.

A cable Fernandez sent to Roosevelt and published in Alma Mater today, read as follows:

Widower's $12,200 Missing With His Mail-Order Fiancee

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 6 (AP).—It cost Felicks Skibicki $12,200 to qualify as a "nice, quiet, saving man of good character, not young, with ideas of marriage."

All Skibicki got for the money was a five-day acquaintance with "Anna" from Detroit, and an excellent bunch of celery.

Anna's disappearance Saturday worried Skibicki so much he appealed to the police but when he looked in his safety deposit box today there wasn't enough nerve builder in the celery even to approach negotiating Skibicki's mental condition back to normal.

Here's the way the police tell it, after Skibicki had told it to them:

He saw an advertisement in a Polish language paper and it appealed to him. He is a widower and has nine children. He was looking for a "nice, quiet, saving woman of good character, not young, with ideas of marriage" and he noted that Anna Kolass, 35, of Detroit, had advertised for a man answering just such qualifications.

Letters were exchanged. Anna arrived last Tuesday to look over the candidate. At least that was what Skibicki thought. Oh, yes, she had $6,000 she wanted to put in a safe place. Nothing like the safety deposit box in which Skibicki was keeping the $12,200, a lifetime of hard work had brought him. And, of course, inasmuch as Anna had agreed to marry him, she could hold the key.

Anna disappeared Saturday and Skibicki appealed to the police, but it wasn't until today that he looked in the box. His $12,200 was missing along with Anna's $6,000 and in their place was a nice bunch of celery.

Litvinoff Will Arrive Today In Washington

Hull and Other Officials Will Escort Diplomat to White House.

By Kendall Foss.

Maxim Maximovitch Litvinoff, people's commissar for foreign affairs of the U. S. S. R., will arrive in Washington this afternoon.

He is coming to discuss with President Roosevelt possible resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia.

He will be the first Soviet representative ever to make an official entry into the Nation's Capital. Although his government still does not officially exist in the eyes of Washington, Comrade Litvinoff will be taken off the Berengaria by a cutter and escorted from Jersey City to Washington with all the dignity due his rank, and he will be met at the Union Station by the Secretary of State and other high officials.

Will Visit White House.

Preceded by motorcycle police, he will be taken at once to the White House. There will be a gratifying amount of ceremonial connected with each step in the day's program.

After his meeting with President Roosevelt, which will be entirely formal and brief, he will be conducted to the home of Boris Skvirsky, for 12 years Soviet representative in the United States. Litvinoff plans to make Skvirsky's home his headquarters here.

Fifteen years ago Litvinoff sought to come to America in an official capacity. Lenin had just named him first Soviet Ambassador to the United States. He did not get a visa.

On Wednesday the visiting commissar will be called for and driven to the State Department, where he will pay a formal call on Secretary Hull and then get down to work.

Interim for Luncheon.

There will be an interim for a ceremonial luncheon at the White House at 1 o'clock, where Secretary Hull will also be a guest. Then back to the State Department and to work.

On Thursday or Friday, as soon as the progress of the discussions at the department warrant it, the negotiators will adjourn to the White House, where the finishing touches will be placed on whatever tentative agreement has been reached.

At the State Department Litvinoff will be dealing with Undersecretary Phillips, Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore, William C. Bullitt, special assistant to the Secretary, and Robert F. Kelley, chief of the Division of Eastern European Affairs.

As a final preparation for the Soviet commissar's visit, President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Phillips, Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and Mr. Bullitt.

Talks to Be Informal.

The talks beginning tomorrow will be more or less informal, that is, there will be nothing suggestive of a fixed agenda. The Department men intend to "explore" the ground in company with the Russian to discover whether resumption of normal relations between the two countries is feasible.

Outstanding subjects to be touched upon include the question of propaganda, debts and claims and counter-claims. Obviously there is no intention to work out the details of the claims; presumably only a recognition of the existence of said claims will be sought and the exact figures left to a commission.

It is frequently emphasized that resumption of relations is by no means to be regarded as a foregone conclusion to the Litvinoff visit. Nothing, it is said, is definite, for while the Soviet Union obviously desires resumption and always has, resumption of normal relations will occur only if the discussions indicate they would have a fair chance of enjoying a reasonably serene future.

Ambassador Selected.

Litvinoff expects to name Alexander Troyanovsky as first Soviet Ambassador to the United States it was reported unofficially today, according to a United Press dispatch.

The appointment would indicate the significant role which Far Eastern affairs may be expected to assume in United States-Soviet relations, Troyanovsky having been Moscow's recent envoy to Japan.

Troyanovsky, 50 years old, formerly was a Czarist officer and after the Bolshevik revolution served in the Red army.

thing in return for these burdens. They want to give nothing and take everything."

He questioned whether some of the objections did not result because the NRA "raised wages and reduced hours of work and thus increased costs, in order to relieve the despair of 4,000,000 bread winners."

Declaring the NRA and the Roosevelt administration have "pulled the country one-quarter way out of the March dumps, 25 per cent in six months," Johnson said it had done so without violating the Constitution, menacing the freedom of the press or coercing any industry into a code.

Some opponents of the NRA, Johnson said, have resorted to a device of witch doctors, which he described as "to set up a hobgoblin and then dance around the fire beating the tomtom and screaming at it."

"Prejudices Aroused."

"It awes the trusting natives, and nine times out of ten, it does the trick of prejudicing the natives into prejudices against their own interests," he said. "There is no limit to which this trick may not go. * * *

"It is time to wake up and get rid of savages fetishes. * * * This country under the incitation of witch doctors has the jitters. We are seeing things on the stairs."

Johnson said he had heard the President say that he would not censor any department of the Government, and that he wanted the truth told. He said that no press ever was given more absolute freedom than in and about the NRA, and that the entire Administration had been more than cordial to newspaper comment and suggestions.

"We do not mind really honest and substantial dead cats," he said, "and I have some justly coming to me. My only complaint is that most of these dead cats are synthetic. The biggest imitation dead cat is the one about the freedom of the press.

"I am as devoted as any of these critics to the constitutional principle of a free press. Nothing ever will be done in, or by, the NRA to impair it. * * *

Criticism Invited.

"Opposition and criticism has not only not been resented, it has been invited on every decision and action * * * Even in the formation of policies, responsible representatives of the press have been taken into confidence. * * *

"And system for licensing the press is wholly repugnant to me. Even as a soldier in the war I did not believe in any suppression of news, except as such as helped the enemy, news of projected military movements or conditions of supply and transport. I do not believe in any restrictions on the press today."

The NRA chief said the alleged unconstitutionality of the recovery act was as great a hobgoblin as that of the freedom of the press. He said the NRA had put 4,000,000 hopeless and destitute people back to work and raised the wages of millions of others above a bare sustenance level.

Sweatshops Abolished.

Declaring it also had wiped out the sweatshop and child labor, he asked: "Does anyone believe that a revolting ancestry ever expected that, in writing the Constitution, they intended to perpetuate these abominations?"

Denying also that the NRA set up a dictatorship, Johnson defined the recovery administration as "a democracy where industry, labor, and consumers meet—a vast public corporation for the common good."

The only conditions imposed on industry by the NRA, he said, were those preventing the sweatshop and providing that every industry wishing to organize for its own benefits must deal with representatives chosen by its own labor.

"Beyond that there is no compulsion on any industry," he said. "If there be an industry that does not want to submit a code, it does not have to unless it is abusing its labor.

"We are entering an era ushered in by the leading men in industry and labor who are on our staff. That is the new day and deal and the whole trouble with our few opponents is that they are seeing things under the bed.

"Certain sections of the press are inciting these jitters by headlines. My only request is that the gentlemen of the fourth estate give us a chance and not lend themselves to this primitive witch-doctor dancing."

Opposition Foreseen.

"When I took the job," the administrator said, "I had an accurate vision of at least a small part of the future. I said—publicly at the very outset—that to take it was just like mounting the guillotine on a bet that the ax wouldn't work—that the early applause would cease and the air would be full of dead cats."

"There was no magic in these prophecies. I had been through the same thing before. I knew exactly what was in the law I had sworn to execute. I knew what it would do to a certain few and I knew their methods of fighting back because I know them—not by repute or hearsay—but intimately and well. I knew that it stepped on a few toes—and some of the biggest kickingest toes in the country. I knew they had been used to trampling anybody who opposed them and I knew that as soon as they dared they would turn on the NRA."

Johnson said that there "is room in the NRA for every bit of experience and assistance and guidance and actual service that any responsible critic has to offer."

He said that some of the foremost men of industry and commerce were on the NRA staff and that it had been a "liberal education" for such men. It made converts, he said, out of many who once were highly critical.

Closer Study Urged.

"To understand the NRA," he added, "it is necessary to get close to it and be part of it for a little while. We will be glad to take on any of these gentlemen, no matter how critical, and give them high responsibility for curing the very things they complain about. We have done that more than once and we are developing a plan now to do it on a much wider scale by a system of rotation."

Johnson made a plea for commerce and industry to give "months of service that it owes" to the country at this time "instead of sniping from incomplete knowledge."

"Never in the history of our Government," Johnson declared, "was there so much opportunity for service and so little excuse for sterile sniping. NRA is neither a dictatorship nor a bureaucracy—it is a form of National planning where every opposing interest has a voice. There will always be controversy in NRA because it is a balanced organization of industry, workers and consumers trying to compose conflicting interests for the general good."

The General said that there were "always 10 per centers in any great movement who can not be counted upon to play the game."

Revisions, If Needed.

"But they can not stop NRA. If it works unfairly anywhere, we will correct it. If it needs revision, we will revise it. But the great fundamental principle is working and working as intended. The benefits of the great public works are beginning to pour forth. The agricultural adjustment act has brought a new day to the South and will progressively increase its effect throughout this region; the home and farm loan acts are moving in an accelerating rate; the move to liquidate frozen bank credits is on the way—all these forces are about to center with the increased purchasing power of the 4,000,000 reemployed."

"It is," Johnson concluded, "no time for calamity howling. It is a time to get ready to take care of increased business and to carry on the excellent program thus far gained."

Fair Practice Code For Stocks Asked

legislation expected to follow the Senate committee's investigation to the end that it shall put additional restrictions on the investment banking houses, beyond those which were incorporated in the 1933 securities act. Some leading bankers and industrialists meanwhile are assailing the securities act as too stringent.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, has stated that although the securities act provides protection for investors he believes it would be "excellent" to make the safeguards "double-barreled" by incorporating some of them into the code.

The code, as originally proposed, related only to hours and wages, placed Administrative authority in a code committee to be dominated by the Investment Bankers' Association, and provided that any banking house could withdraw if President Roosevelt vetoed its policies.

Plan Called Beneficial.

The NRA objected, caused removal of the clause permitting withdrawal, and asked for fair trade practices. The investment bankers, however, while saying they were willing to frame such practices, brought out at the hearing that they thought they were supposed to go into a separate document and would not be due for 120 days. Whiteside then asked for them at once.

"I do think that this division of trade has not adequately prepared its case, and I think it has not taken it seriously, and I think it has lost an opportunity to do something that would be truly beneficial to these investment bankers," Whiteside stated.

"Adoption of trade practices to me, and I think to the Administration, can be accomplished through codes which become laws of industry, and may be the most important single thing which has been done in generations in the banking industry.

Sees Benefits on Way.

"I think there has been a reaction in the minds of the general public as to what is being accomplished here in Washington, but I am very sure that is at the low point at the present time and that you will see very, very radical changes which are particularly beneficial to this industry come out of the codes if industry will take the opportunity."

It is perhaps the NRA's fault for not telling the banking houses "more distinctly" that it wanted trade practices in the code, he said, but added that "frankly our viewpoint has changed.

"Perhaps that has changed more rapidly than we thought it had," he went on, "and I think these codes are becoming peculiarly interesting to the President."

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 6 (AP).—Stricken suddenly ill, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, famous singer, was in Mercy Hospital today. Her physician, Dr. Charles M. Fox, said it is planned to keep her quiet several days. It was indicated she may have appendicitis.

The 72-year-old contralto, beloved "mother" of former service men, was near exhaustion from work in the NRA drive when she was taken from her Coronado home. In her recent Eastern trip Mme. Schumann-Heink took part in the American Legion convention in Chicago.

Court to Rule On Crawford Defense Today

of defense counsel, demanded that the jurist be considered an "adverse witness" though summoned by the defense. The lawyer cited a Federal law of 1875, under which he charged Judge Alexander might face criminal prosecution for the manner in which the grand jury was chosen. He explained his purpose was to gain the privilege of cross-examining the judge. The request was granted.

$5,000 Fine Penalty.

The statute cited provided no person could be excluded from jury service because of "previous condition of servitude," and carried a penalty of $5,000 fine. Houston later said, however, he had no intention of seeking prosecution of the judge.

Judge Alexander testified he had served on the beach since May, 1929, and drew the jury list involved in the Crawford indictment. He explained the tax list was the source from which the jury roster was chosen.

"Did you or did you not consider the Negro population?" Houston inquired.

"I considered the population as a whole," Judge Alexander responded. "I didn't know whether they were white or colored."

Questioning developed no Negroes were included among any of the lists compiled by Judge Alexander. The judge said those selected were well qualified. He added he knew each juror and considered individual reputations for honesty, intelligence and reliability. He insisted the list as a whole was comprised of persons "a little above the average."

Judge Alexander, pressed for his opinion, conceded it had been the custom to choose white persons exclusively for jury duty in Virginia. He said he knew only two Negroes qualified to serve, but they had not been considered for the Crawford jury. He said Negroes were considered, however, for more recent juries, though none was chosen.

Criticized by Houston.

In his argument, Houston critized Judge Alexander as "a slow and reluctant witness."

Houston said the important questions involved were whether at the time the Crawford grand jury was chosen and Negroes qualified for jury service lived in Loudoun County and whether such Negroes were excluded "solely on account of race and color." He shouted affirmative answers to both issues.

"All the testimony here today," Houston declared, "shows there have been no Negroes on grand juries or trial juries in Virginia, so their deliberate exclusion must be admitted by the Commonwealth. Public policy in Virginia is that Negroes are not to serve on juries.

"Judge Alexander has been revolving around a closed circle—a wheel excluding all Negroes. In other words, a caste system is prevalent in Virginia and the South."

John T. Galleher, Commonwealth's attorney of Loudoun County, and Frank M. Ray, Commonwealth's attorney of Clarke County, denied Negroes were discriminated against.

"The sole issue," Gallaher contended, "is whether Judge Alexander excluded Negroes solely on account of their race. The Commonwealth denies Negroes were excluded, denies there are Negroes in Loudoun County qualified for grand jury service and denies the Constitutional rights of Negroes were invaded. Judge Alexander selected an intelligent class of people he thought would measure up to the requirements of law."

The defense called 13 Negro property holders to support charges that Negoes residing in the county were qualified for jury service.

Surrounded by Houston and three other colored attorneys, Crawford sat in the front of the courtroom throughout. He appeared bored.

Among the spectators was Adjt. Gen. G. W. Waller, of Richmond, representing the Virginia National Guard, and Gov. Pollard.

State police details were led by Capt. G. K. Sexton, commandant of the force.

Woman's Slayer Ends Life in Prison

Man Who Asked Hanging Dies in 50-Foot Leap.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 6 (AP).—Dr. Harold N. Guilfoyle, Hartford veterinary surgeon sarving life sentence for second degree murder in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Clare Kavanaugh Gaudet here in January, 1928, committed suicide today in the presence of guards by leaping 50 feet from the top tier of the main cell block at the State's prison at Wethersfield.

He landed on his head on a flagstone floor and was dead when guards reached him.

The act recalled Dr. Guilfoyle's petition on June, 1932, that his conviction of second degree murder be changed to first degree and that he be sentenced to death by hanging.

New Trial Won By Dr. Shepard In Wife's Death

U. S. Supreme Court Rules "Dying Statement" Not Conclusive.

The United States Supreme Court yesterday reversed the decision of the lower courts which had sentenced Maj. Charles A. Shepard, 62-year-old Army surgeon, to life imprisonment on the charge of murdering his wife, Zanana, 37, at the Fort Riley, Kans., Military Reservation in 1929.

The decision grants Dr. Shepard a new trial.

In the original trial in 1930 a nurse testified that when Mrs. Shepard became ill she had said her husband was trying to poison her. She had asked the nurse, according to the testimony, whether there was sufficient whisky left in a bottle from which Mrs. Shepard had been drinking to determine whether it contained poison. An autopsy showed traces of poison in the dead woman's body.

The court held that the alleged statement of Mrs. Shepard did not constitute a dying declaration because it was not "spoken without hope of recovery and in the shadow of impending death."

"Fear or even belief that illness will end in death," the opinion written by Justice Cardozo said, "will not avail of itself to make a dying declaration. There must be a 'settled hopeless expectation' that death is near at hand, and what is said must have been spoken in the hush of its impending presence."

The Shepard case has attracted wide attention. Mrs. Shepard died June 15, 1929, following illness of several weeks. Her illness began shortly after the return of her husband to Fort Riley after spending four months at Brooks Field, San Antonio, Tex. A stenographer at San Antonio made the statement that Shepard made love to her and had asked her to marry him "as soon as he obtained a divorce." The Shepards had been married 12 years. The dead woman was his second wife.

"There is circumstantial evidence to sustain a finding by the jury that to win himself freedom he turned to poison and murder," the opinion of Justice Cardozo, from which there was no dissent, said in part. "Even so, guilt was contested and conflicting inferences are possible. The defendant asks us to hold that by the acceptance of incompetent evidence the scales were weighted to his prejudice and in the end to his undoing."

"That is why the question of Japan interests our country."

Then, directing attention to a Soviet proposal to sell the Chinese Eastern Railway and its failure to obtain the signature of Japan to a nonaggression pact, the president of the Council of People's Commissars added:

"Events in Manchuria show that treaties and contracts between the U. S. S. R. and Manchuria and Japan have not been kept.

"Further, the Japanese press becomes increasingly more insolent in publishing plans for the annexation of Siberia.

"This causes us to be very attentive and compels us to prepare for unexpected events. The government in Manchuria is not responsible for this situation.

"Japan is the master there and is responsible for everything. So, while striving to keep friendly relations everywhere, we shall continue as in the last year to strengthen the red army in the Far East.

Forecasts Victory.

"We expect when the moment comes that it will be victorious."

Prolonged applause and cheering greeted this last remark. The audience comprised 3,000 especially selected workers and officials.

Every mention of Stalin's name by four speakers also brought an enthusiastic demonstration. Stalin did not speak, however, and instead of occupying his usual seat at the speakers' table sat directly behind it.

Soviet Russia will greet another red October tomorrow, its populace greatly cheered by an excellent harvest which assures next year's food supply after two years of crop failures.

Legions of the proletariat were ready to march again to commemorate another milestone in the history of the first workers' and peasants' republic—the anniversary of the revolution through which Bolsheviks seized control of all the Russias.

Hope for Revolution.

In two separate manifestos today the Revolutionary War Council and the Communist Internationale joined in voicing hopes for a world revolution.

The war council called on Red Army chiefs "to train each red soldier to be devoted in heart and soul to the world proletarian revolution."

Sure of its own power, the order said, "the Red Army stands on the Soviet border for the defense of the peaceful labor workers and peasants and the peaceful policy of the Soviet Union."

The executive committee of the Communist International urged workers and laboring masses "to join the ranks with the proletariat U. S. S. R. to force a uniform revolutionary front against Fascism and war, against Japan and against world imperialism, for the second Socialist five-year-plan, for the Chinese Soviets and for a Soviet Germany."

"Bootleg" Milk Here 4 Years, Inquiry Shows

Independent Distributors Say Nearby Supply Inadequate.

Milk from dairy farms not licensed by the District Health Department has been "bootlegged" into the Washington market in large quantities since 1929, it was revealed yesterday by Government auditors testifying before the Senate Milk Investigating Committee.

Independent milk distributors, who are accused of having imported the unlicensed products, contend they were compelled to go into other markets to get milk and cream because of inability to get adequate supplies from the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Faced with a shortage, James J. Ward, of the Walker Hill Dairies, testified he had appealed for more cream to John McGill, jr., secretary of the producers' association, without success.

"I told him I could not compete with outside cream," Ward said, "and he told me, 'If you think it is coming in from outside sources you had better take the same chances as the others are.'"

Ward said he paid as high as $13 a can for 40 per cent cream, for which shippers to the local market were getting $11.

Seal Questions Simpson.

Questioned by Elwood H. Seal, special counsel to the investigating committee, Auditor Norman S. Simpson said the dairies in which he found records of outside shipments are: Alderney Green-Meadows, Fairfax Farms, Marcey Bros., Wakefield, Walker-Hill, and Model Farms.

The product was received here in the form of cream and milk, and the grand total of the alleged unlicensed shipments since 1929 is 134,274 gallons of cream, or the equivalent of 1,342,740 gallons of milk, and 36,479 gallons of milk as milk.

Cross - examination by Sefton Darr, attorney for the Alderney-Green Meadows - Fairfax Farms Dairy, disclosed the auditors had nothing to show where the milk was produced or how it was used.

Under District health regulations, said W. Gwynn Gardiner, attorney for the producers' association, the shipment of cream into this market from unlicensed sources is permitted only for ice cream making.

Some Shippers Unlicensed.

In some instances, Simpson continued, it was found the milk came from licensed producers to unlicensed shippers; in another case it was found a shipper was sending surplus milk purchased from the National Dairy Products Corporation affiliates in Baltimore under Baltimore health regulations.

On an average, Ward said, outside cream costs more than cream purchased direct from cream shipper on this market.

Ward explained the outside cream purchased by him was used solely in manufactured products.

Earlier in the day, McGill testified the proposed milk marketing agreement for this area benefited producers.

Testimony was introduced by Mr. Seal, which he said showed conclusively the National Dairy Products Corporation had a "monopoly on the Baltimore market."

Navy Offers Plan to Near London Limit

Will Ask Congress for Air Carrier, Cruisers; Cost $100,000,000.

A three-fold program, designed to bring the Navy within "striking distance" of its strength under the London pact, will be presented to Congress by the Navy Department, it was learned yesterday.

The program calls for:

Increase of personnel by 2,000.

Adoption of a plan providing that when a ship is placed in service, replacement reserves will be provided for, so that at the end of its useful life money will be available to replace it.

The cost of the proposed building project would be about $100,000,000. This would be in addition to the recent grant of $238,000,000 from the public works fund.

3 Sides Fear Fraud As N. Y. Race Ends

didates whose ideals of local government are the same as the ideals of the three great Democratic governors, who did their best in this great cause. For that reason, I am voting tomorrow in New York City for the recovery party candidates, who have presented themselves under the leadership of Joseph V. McKee."

The sporting crowd, which went in for making books on this most bitterly contested of New York City elections in a generation, announced tonight there had been comparatively little betting. Interest was possibly greater than ever before in the possibility that Tammany's hold might be smashed. But there was a shortage of money everywhere reported.

LaGuardia ruled a slightly better than even money favorite over his two principal opponents, with McKee at longer odds than on yesterday and O'Brien chances held at no better than 2½ to 1.

LaGuardia's campaign manager claimed he would win by 650,000 plurality. On behalf of Mayor O'Brien a margin of 499,000 votes was predicted.

McKee and his various spokesmen were not looking forward to victory by more than 300,000.

Both LaGuardia and O'Brien predicted today that McKee would run third.

It is believed LaGuardia will run well ahead of his ticket, and that should he win he will find many of his present political opponents in office with him. Frank J. Prial, Tammany candidate for comptroller, and Nathan Strauss, jr., recovery choice for aldermanic president, were regarded as likely winners, as was Ferdinand Pecora, candidate for district attorney for New York County on the McKee ticket.

LaGuardia Rests.

LaGuardia rested today, and his last message of the campaign was that "New York must be saved. Corrupt political machines must be destroyed."

So bitterly has the campaign been waged, there is great fear of voting irregularities, frauds and disorders tomorrow. Attorney General John J. Bennett has assigned special assistants to vote fraud inquiries and two special grand juries were still busy today checking over claims and illegal registrations.

Both LaGuardia and McKee, after voting tomorrow, intend to participate actively in the so-called honest voting activities.

McKee today reiterated his charges that LaGuardia was involved with Richard Nash, former Federal narcotic agent, claiming that LaGuardia intervened to keep Nash in New York after the agent's transfer had been ordered.

"As a result of LaGuardia's intervention," said McKee, "this crooked agent was kept in New York, where a short time later he was caught bribing another Government agent to cover up dope selling."

explains the support which Ogden Mills has lent to a man whose political and economic views were once quite the opposite of his own.

And if Tammany's mayor, John P. O'Brien, should confound the prophets by sliding through, the Tammany Tiger would lick its chops after a period of much anxiety. The Messrs. Curry, McCooey and other chieftains would be more entrenched than ever. Bronx Leader Flynn, ardent Roosevelt ian, would be downed, barring repentance and reconciliation. It would be heralded, likewise, as a heavy blow to the Administration.

So, regardless of neutrality, the White House would be less than human if it did not watch the New York returns closely, hopefully.

And there are possibly indicative elections elsewhere. Cleveland, in choosing between Harry L. Davis, Republican, and Ray A. Miller, incumbent Democratic mayor, to whom Mr. Farley telegraphed his "wishes for your success," after Representative Martin L. Sweeney, insurgent Democrat who lost out in the mayoralty primary, had wired to Mr. Farley excoriating Mayor Miller and the Democratic regulars. Thus Mr. Farley exhibited a National interest in the Cleveland battle.

Four Democrats and two Republicans are in a scramble to be Mayor of Boston. Both New York and New Jersey have legislative races in which control of lower houses, now Republican, is at stake. Kentucky is choosing half of its Senate and 100 members of its House, while in Louisville, Prof. Neville Miller, dean of the Louisville Law School, and Democratic candidate for mayor, is trying to oust Dan M. Carrell and his long entrenched Republican forces.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, appointed to replace Secretary of the Navy Swanson, is scheduled for a victory over Republican Henry A. Wise, in the only senatorial race of the day. Philadelphia is at a fever pitch over Democratic threats to encroach upon the preserves of the famous Vare machine. All these contests will be construed nationally by the party oracles.

As for repeal, the six States voting today are Pennsylvania, Ohio, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Utah. Only three of these are needed in the repeal column to extirpate the eighteenth amendment from the Constitution, since 33 States have already led the way in an unbroken antiprohibition sweep, and 36 are needed to seal the doom of the basic dry law. The most the drys can hope for is to break the unanimity, which they stand an outside chance of doing in Utah, perhaps in South Carolina.

Repeatedly, Mr. Farley has added his voice to the repeal crusade to urge on "this great victory," while for the prohibitionists, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, appealed for a last stand by the women, and added, "I know they can win if they'll go to the polls and vote against repeal."

Pinchot Concedes State.

Pennsylvania is counted overwhelmingly for repeal, even bone-dry Gov Pinchot conceding that the dry cause is hopeless. In Ohio, native heath of the Antisaloon League, the wet tide already has rolled across the State in past elections. Dry Gov. George White has announced that he will vote for repeal and also an end of the State dry law and has promised to call an extra session soon after December 5 to enact liquor-control legislation. Hence, Ohio is counted surely in the repeal column.

In South Carolina both wets and drys predict victory. Mr. Farley felt it advisable to join the repealers there in a recent rally at which Senator Byrnes and Gov. Blackwood were the other orators. Senator E. B. Smith, on the other hand, declared against repeal.

In North Carolina, former Senator Cameron Morrison, known as "Palladium of the Drys," has led a fierce fight to save the eighteenth amendment, on which issue he was snowed under just a year ago by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, now joined by former Gov. Max Gardner and Senator Josiah Bailey in counteracting the Morrison crusade.

Drys Hope to Win Utah.

Kentucky's fame for Bourbon and mint juleps is hardly likely to be dimmed by a dry victory, and the drys have no hope of stemming the tide there. Utah is their most hopeful ground for a last stand, though their success there would be empty with the loss of the other States. However, Senator Thomas was elected as a repealist in Utah, his colleague, Senator King, is for repeal, and so is Former Gov. Dern, now Secretary of War.

The results may be known long before midnight, though under Kentucky's "honest election law" the ballot boxes are not opened election night and the results may not be reported for days.

Nearly a fifth of the country's population is represented in today's voting on repeal, and by the time the polls close 39 States, having 101,000,000 inhabitants, or nearly 88 per cent of the population, will be on record. So far the vote for repeal has been more than three to one, 11,329,190 for repeal, 3,753,657 against, according to Associated Press figures.

It will be a month before the verdict will be translated into a legal fact because the final ratifying conventions have yet to be held in three of the 33 States which voted previously, as well as in the States voting today. Florida's convention is November 14, Texas' November 27, Main's December 6. Of the six voting today, Kentucky will be the first to hold its ratifying convention. South Carolina will follow on December 4, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Utah on December 5, and North Carolina December 6.

Either Ohio or Pennsylvania looms as the probable thirty-sixth State, necessary to obliterate a Constitutional amendment for the first time in history. The Attorney General has ruled that the eighteenth amendment expires the moment the thirty-sixth State convention has ratified the repeal.

Revenue in Mind.

On the basis of a tariff commission study on which Treasury tax gatherers have been working, the yield from liquor taxes, including beer and wine, will not exceed $700,000,000 the first year unless consumption is much larger than expected. Mr. Shouse pointed out in his radio speech that "in calculating the possible revenue to the Federal Government one must take into account that upon accomplishment of repeal a far wider territory will be open to the legalized sale of liquors than at the time the eighteenth amendment was adopted." "Furthermore," he predicted, "it is certain that this open territory will be largely extended within the next year."

However, the tariff commission study, going back to 1900, shows that the highest yield from all liquor taxes, including beer and wine, was $483,000,000 in 1919, the year before the legalized drought, when taxes were $2.20 a gallon on distilled spirits and wine and $6 a barrel on beer. Under existing law the taxes now on distilled spirits and wine are $1.10 a gallon and $5 a barrel on beer.

But consumption in 1919 was 991,000,000 gallons for all three beverages, whereas in 1913 the consumption was 2,232,000,000 gallons, the highest on record. Yet the tax yield then was only $230,000,000 with a levy of $1.10 a gallon on distilled spirits, approximately 8 cents a gallon on wine and $1 a barrel on beer.

Consumption, according to the Treasury experts, will have to reach 1,500,000,000 gallons to net $700,000,000 of the revenue badly needed for budget-balancing, or for replacement of some of the existing so-called nuisance taxes. Tariff collections on imported liquor yielded but $19,025,585 at the peak in 1914 and fell to $1,164,189 in 1919, so that large returns from this source are unlikely.

Nevertheless the end of the dry era will greatly benefit budgets, both national and local. Aside from political implications in today's balloting, both White House and Treasury will watch returns with this budgetary factor prominently in mind.

Long Machine To Be Studied In New Orleans

Senate Hearings Resume in Crescent City Monday; 200 Witnesses Ready.

The Senate committee investigating the election of Senator John S. Overton, of Louisiana, will resume hearings in New Orleans Monday. This was announced yesterday following the demand Sunday by Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, chairman of the Louisiana Women's Committee, that members of the investigating committee resign. Mrs. Hammond said the attitude of the committee has been "inexcusable and wrongful."

John Holland, special investigator for the Senate committee, left last night for New Orleans. Senator Thomas, a member of the committee, is expected to arrive in New Orleans next Sunday. He has been making prohibition speeches in Utah. Other members of the committee are Senators Connally, chairman; Logan, Carey and Townsend.

Senator Townsend is expected here Wednesday when the Senate Banking and Currency Committee resumes its investigation. Senator Carey is expected to take part in the coming campaign in Wyoming, where a successor to the late Senator Kendrick will be elected. Senator Connally is at his home in Texas.

Holland said he is prepared to turn over to the committee the names of 200 witnesses. They will testify as to alleged election irregularities.

Peter Arno Takes Count in Argument

on his chin. The knockout followed words between him and Drexel Biddle Steel, entertainer and actor from Philadelphia, who was giving a supper party for Claire Delmar, Swiss actress.

Steel denied he delivered the potent poke and Sally O'Neill, actress, companion of Arno at the club, denied reports that she belabored Steel with a chair. Steel said Arno was struck by Gordon Butler, Steel's business manager.

Arno, who once had a sensational altercation with Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., said he was struck by Butler after he, Arno, had seized Steel and "popped him" for "annoying my women guests, Miss Sally O'Neill and another young woman."

Among those at the scene were Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Gable.

Miss O'Neill verified Steel's statement that it was another man who struck Arno. She said her impression was that the "other man" struck her companion on the chin from the rear, which the ringsiders agreed would have been quite a feat. One version was that Steel drew back to "paste" Arno, but that someone beat him to the punch.

Steel Wires Statement.

Steel wired to New York a statement indicating he became incensed at something Arno said after Steel introduced him to Miss Delmar. Steel said Arno approached the Delmar party table and "accused me (Steel) of knowing him when his name was Curtis Peters, interior decorator for Gilda Gray."

"I arose and presented him to Miss Delmar, which she acknowledged," said Steel. "That was not enough for him and I explained at that moment there was just one thing that he lacked—besides being born a man he had failed being born a gentleman.

"Mr. Gordon Butler, when Mr. Arno made a pass at me, stepped in to defend not only Miss Delmar but me, and sent Mr. Arno sailing across the dance floor, much to Miss Delmar's amusement and to Mr. Arno's surprise."

Miss O'Neill said she supposed the way the report started that she hit Steel with a chair was that Steel stood near Arno with a chair in hand and after the knockout and that she rushed over in an attempt to prevent further trouble.

Arno Tells His Side.

"Last night at the club," said Arno, "Steel came to my table and I told him to cut out talk about his being an intimate friend of mine and that I was going in business with him.

"He went back to his table. A few minutes after that I went over to the orchestra leader and agreed to play the piano. While I was playing I saw Steel had returned to my table and was annoying my women guests.

"I walked back over to the table, grabbed him, pushed him back over to his table and then popped him. As I did so, this man Gordon Butler—Steel has a butler—smacked me on the side of the head and I went down.

"While this was going on Steel raised a chair and made for me. Miss O'Neill rushed in between us.

"The next time I see Drexel Biddle Steel," Arno added, "I'm going to hang one on him that he won't forget for a long time."

There were no hard feelings held by Steel.

R. B. Mellon Seeks Review Of Tax Finding

Petition Discloses Income for 1930 Amounted to $3,598,931.

Richard Beatty Mellon, president of the Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh and brother of Andrew W. Mellon, yesterday filed with the United States Board of Tax Appeals a petition asking that it review its finding of a shortage of $18,051 in his 1930 tax payment.

The petition disclosed that Mellon's total income in 1930 was $3,598,931.

After due allowances, his taxable income was set at $3,551,905 for the year, and a tax was set by the Bureau of Internal Revenue at $684,118. On recomputation, however, the bureau determined the proper tax should have been $703,039 and sent Mellon a notice September 27 that he was deficient in his return by $18,951.

Opened New Chapter.

The deficiency opened a new chapter in the story of Mellon taxes. Andrew W. Mellon, as Secretary of the Treasury and afterward, was criticized in connection with income taxes and tax refunds to Mellon aluminum interests.

The controversy over Richard's 1930 taxes covered several months, resulting in his protesting the internal revenue findings in January, consulting the bureau in March, and filing a brief in August. The September deficiency notice brought the petition to the Tax Appeal Board for a redetermination.

The Internal Revenue Bureau, in declaring the deficiency, held Mellon should have included in his income $143,828 in dividends from the Mellbank Corporation. It also denied certain commission adjustments claimed by Mellon on the lease of the Hotel Pittsburgher, and held that a profit on an insurance policy should have been included.

Error Is Alleged.

Mellon declared the commissioner of internal revenue erred in attributing a profit on cashing the insurance policy, accepted as collateral, claiming a loss instead of a profit. He also claimed he had overstated certain dividends on his original return.

The $142,694 Mellbank dividends never had been received, he said, as the profits of that corporation had been held as protection for its group of banks around Pittsburgh.

He said his contributions to charity for 1930 had been $677,162 and that the commissioner of internal revenue had erred in allowing deductions in this connection.

Many Women Resume Work

Hundreds Are Employed Daily Through Federal Emergency Relief.

Following the suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, a comprehensive program of employment relief for women who are dependent upon their own earnings has been undertaken, it was announced yesterday at the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Under the direction of Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, director of the women's work, hundreds of unemployed girls and women are being put to work daily in some form of employment relief.

The idea of this program was given to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, by Mrs. Roosevelt, who felt that women out of jobs should be given some such rehabilitation program as unemployed men have in their Civilian Conservation Corps.

Mrs. Roosevelt announced the completion of the program at her press conference yesterday, although Mrs. Woodward made public the details of operation.

All State administrators have been instructed by Mr. Hopkins to appoint a woman to work with Mrs. Woodward in setting up local organizations. Seven of these appointments already have been made and approved by Mrs. Woodward's office. It is expected that all the rest will be appointed within two weeks.

Well-equipped sewing rooms, canning kitchens and small handcraft shops have been established in various parts of the country. Twenty-two States have sewing rooms both in cities and rural communities.

I Am Not a Go-Getter

I am not a salesman, nor a high-powered executive. But I know a little about a lot of things and have a huge amount of "useless information." I have a critical sense and some editorial ability. I can write a good letter. Lobbying, publicity and research have taken up a lot of my time. I have a practical knowledge of German and French, a smattering of other European languages and, incidentally, of American and English. Occasionally I DO get ideas. Can you use me?

Union Indorses Bride as Counsel

Reappointment of W. W. Bride as corporation counsel will benefit organized labor in the District, the Central Labor Union said last night in adopting a resolution urging his retention.

The indorsement was supported by John B. Colpoys, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, and John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman.

Needy Pupils Get Clothing

200 Cases Before Board of Education Have Been Relieved.

Food and clothing for needy school children are being furnished as quickly as such cases are discovered, school officials said yesterday.

Miss Fay L. Bentley, director of school attendance and work permits, said that cases of children lacking sufficient clothing are being given attention by relief agencies. More than 200 cases revealed in a report to the Board of Education last week have received attention. Other cases are being reported daily, she said.

School officials do not believe present conditions warrant establishing a program supplying milk and cracker luncheons during recess, as was put into operation last year. Milk and crackers are bought for needy children through a surplus fund kept up through the slightly additional charge made to children who can pay, it was pointed out.

Dry Crusade Continues Here

Prosecution of prohibition violators after today's voting on repeal will be a matter of discretion for local United States attorneys, it was indicated at the Department of Justice yesterday, with some let-up due.

Justice officials frankly admit, that with the Nation merely awaiting passage of four weeks before the prohibition law is wiped out, they are trying to chart a middle course between the country's sentiments and the expiring law.

Concerning prosecution of District bootleggers, Assistant District Attorney David Hart, who is in charge of liquor prosecutions, yesterday said that several liquor law violation cases will be tried before juries this week to determine "their feelings on the matter." He said if juries convict, prosecutions will continue.

Meanwhile, Lieut. George Little, of the police liquor squad, said he will continue his drive on Washington speakeasies begun last week.

House Will Get Separate Bill For Liquor Tax

Speed Sought in Securing Revenue After Repeal; Tariff Argued.

Seizing immediate advantage of coming repeal to bolster Treasury receipts, the House Ways and Means Committee, which is framing general tax law revision, will rush a separate bill to the House proposing liquor revenue methods as soon as Congress convenes.

Decision to put the liquor tax bill ahead of the general revenue measure was announced yesterday by Chairman Samuel B. Hill, of the special House subcommittee studying tax legislation.

"If we put all the tax changes in one bill, controversial issues aside from the liquor question may tie up the measure and delay the new liquor schedules," Hill said last night.

"We don't want to lose any more repeal revenue than we have to."

Earlier, Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee estimated $700,000,000 can be raised annually from Federal taxes on liquor, wines and beer following repeal.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday reached tentative agreement on methods of stopping income tax "postponing" and dodging of the type exposed during Senate Banking Committee hearings.

Members estimate about $100,000,000 annually can be saved from plugging these and other loopholes.

The House subcommittee will get seriously to work on the new liquor levies by Friday, when the liquor control report prepared and submitted to the President by departmental experts will be discussed in executive conference.

Torgler Accused By Arson Witness

Communist Crafty, Says Nazi Police Chief.

Berlin, Nov. 6, (AP).—Edmund Heines, Nazi police chief of Breslau, declared at the Reichstag arson trial today he was firmly convinced Ernst Torgler was "much implicated" in the blaze.

Torgler, once the Communist whip in the German Parliament, was described by the witness as one who would lead his men from the rear while carefully keeping out of the firing line himself.

"As soon as I learned Torgler had been in the Reichstag on the evening of the fire, I felt sure he had something to do with it," Heines testified.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)

By Morgan Baker

BAKER.

NO new appropriations will be needed in more than half of the Government personnel for restoration of salaries, it was revealed yesterday by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

"This is clear from replies already received from departmental heads in our thorough search for concrete figures and facts, which will be presented to Congress in January. While the poll is incomplete, I already have statements showing pay could be restored to more than 400,000 Federal employes without Congress making a single additional appropriation. The restoration could be handled from impoundment of funds," Mr. Babcock declared, quoting letters from officials of several of the larger departments.

"While hearings were in progress on the economy bill, there was much talk about a 'billion-dollar pay roll' and savings of $150,000,000. At that time figures were in the hands of only those recommending Federal salary cuts. Now, since the cost data is being compiled by proponents of restoration of pay, it is apparent the figures were exaggerated.

"Members of Congress are beginning to realize a big boost toward recovery will be effected when the 15 per cent cut is repealed," Mr. Babcock said.

The following questions have been placed before the heads of all Government departments and independent establishments:

1. As to your establishment, what is the total amount of legislative reductions in compensation for the fiscal year 1934, based on the present 85 per cent payment plan?

2. If Congress rescinded the 15 per cent reduction as of January 1, 1934, would release of all impoundments suffice to meet the pay roll?

3. If release of impoundments would not suffice to meet the pay roll, what deficiency appropriation would be required if salaries are restored as of: January, 1934, February, 1934; March, 1934; April, 1934; May, 1934, and June, 1934?

More Indorsements Arrive.

Meanwhile hopes of Government workers for favorable action in their behalf this winter mounted by six more strides—one of them a seven-league step in the form of an indorsement by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York.

So far, there are pledged to salary restoration 111 senators and representatives. Twenty-three others favor repeal of the pay cut, but have made no pledges. Thirteen straddle, while only two have expressed opposition.

Senator Wagner, chairman of the Labor Advisory Board of the NRA, yesterday wrote Mr. Babcock:

"I never was in favor of reduction in the pay of Government workers, although I voted for it when it was made a part of the general economy act. At the present time, with prices rising and with the Government urging private employers to increase their wage payments, I am in favor of removing the reduction which has been placed upon the salaries of Government employes."

Hatfield Promises Aid.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, declared the cuts "highly inconsistent." His statement follows:

"I am unalterably opposed to further reduction in the pay of Government employes. * * * While I am unalterably opposed to this form of tinkering with the currency, it would seem highly inconsistent for the President to reduce Government pay and at the same time destroy the purchasing power of even a reduced pay. * * * But as long as an inflationary program continues it is not right to impose an unfair burden on the household budget of Government employes."

Representative Knute Hill (Democrat), Washington, wrote:

"I heartily favor the restoration of the salaries to the base upon which the 15 per cent reduction is reckoned and will vote for such a bill in the next session of Congress."

Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, declared:

"I will do all I possibly can to repeal that portion of the economy act which reduced Federal salaries. I think it was a serious mistake to register a 15 per cent horizontal cut, thereby adding to an already declining purchasing power. It seems to me inconsistent in its own conduct."

Representative William I. Traeger (Republican), California, stated:

"I can say I am heartily in accord with all the excerpts furnished me on the attached sheet accompanying your letter of the 23d." (i.e. Mr. Babcock's enclosure of Senator Harrison's and other statements favoring repeal of salary reductions).

Representative Harry P. Beam (Democrat), Illinois, said:

Go West, Young Woman.

Go West, young woman, go West,
And learn from the bountiful Mae:
To look like a stick is no longer worthwhile—
The slogan is "Hip, Hip, Hooray!"

Go West, young woman, go West!
There's wisdom in this little rhyme:
A curve's more important to ladies, forsooth,
Than to Gehrig, or Johnson or even Babe Ruth,
If they want beaus to "come up sometime."

Go West, young woman, go West.
Take a tip from beautiful Mae;
Ban lettuce and bran, then eat all you can,
For so, perchance, you will get your man;
At least you will be in the weigh!

"Practically Under Dictator," British Chief Says of U. S.

Constitutional Rule Broken Down Here, Baldwin Tells Meeting.

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, asserted at a rally today that the "ordinary constitution" has broken down in the United States and that Americans are "practically under a dictatorship."

"It certainly would be interesting," he declared, "to see what the backwash of America on Germany will be in 12 or 18 months.

"Thank God we are not an hysterical nation.

"The ordinary constitution has certainly broken down in the United States, and they are practically under a dictatorship. Great Britain is the sole guardian of democracy."

He spoke at a luncheon at which Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon also spoke on achievements of the national government, on the eve of the reopening of Parliament after a three-month recess.

"The British National Government today is the greatest steadying influence in the world," said Mr. MacDonald.

The National Government has saved Great Britain from a dictatorship, Sir John maintained.

"Even in the United States the Americans in their time of trouble are putting their faith in a man, not an institution," he said.

"When you get deep enthusiasm with many temperaments," Mr. Baldwin asserted, "it is not wholly removed from hysteria.

Labor Hearing May Culminate Ford-NRA Row

Strikers' Petition Viewed as Key to Puzzle of His Status.

Henry Ford's controversy with the NRA may be brought nearer a head this week if the National Labor Board decides to arrange a hearing sought by strikers of the Ford plant at Edgewater, N. J.

A petition for the board's help in obtaining a settlement was received yesterday by Chairman Wagner, but he declined to indicate what action might be taken pending a board meeting late today or tomorrow on his return from New York.

From Detroit came reports the Ford company had laid off for seven days half its workers at the River Rouge plant, previously explained as necessitated by hour provisions of the automobile code. The Recovery Administration made no further thrust at the manufacturer, although officials considered the explanation insufficient since an exception had been offered.

At Ford's Detroit offices an official commented "the best service Henry Ford can offer is to remain silent," the Associated Press reported. "The facts speak for themselves; let Johnson do the talking," another man said.

Ford Lay-Offs Begin.

Detroit, Nov. 6 (AP).—Henry Ford's "lay-off plan" to bring average working hours within the NRA auto code went into effect today in the River Rouge plant.

Half of the employes in the plant stayed away from machines and assembly lines, and will remain away for seven days while working hours are brought from 40-a-week to the 35-hour weekly average set by the code.

Then employes who now are at work will be ordered home for a similar period.

H. W. Miller Left $202,000

Widow Named Chief Heir; Sister in Staunton Remembered.

An estate valued at $202,200 was left by Henry Watkins Miller when he died in Bermuda January 18, it was shown yesterday when his widow, Elizabeth Taylor Miller, of 2503 Thirtieth street northwest, filed a petition for probate of his will.

The estate is made up of the Thirtieth street property, valued at $50,000, and cash, stocks and bonds valued at $152,200. With the exception of a few minor bequests, everything is to go to the widow.

The will directs that $10,000 in Government bonds be held in trust for the benefit of a sister, Mary Miller Gibson, Staunton, Va., and provides for $500 bequests to a nephew, E. Lacy Gibson, Staunton; Martha Hawkins Bailey, his wife's niece, of Raleigh, N. C., and Elizabeth Taylor, another of Mrs. Miller's nieces, of Los Angeles. Attorneys Richard H. Wilmer and Douglas L. Hatch represented the estate.

British Press Demands Debt Be Repudiated

Opinion Prevails Payments to U. S. Never Will Be Resumed.

London, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Outright repudiation of Great Britain's war debt to the United States was advocated vehemently by a section of the press today, following word from Washington that the negotiations had failed.

Advocates for default of the next instalment, due on December 15, also gained momentum and public opinion apparently regards the old Mellon-Baldwin debt settlement as dead. The general impression in well-informed circles was that Britain never will resume the payments as specified under that accord of 1926.

The Evening Star, in a strong editorial, urges the government to "cut the knot and repudiate the debt—if only for the sake of America, herself."

The cabinet during the afternoon considered the latest dispatches from Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief war debt negotiator at Washington, reporting failure of the parleys. It was understood that the government authorized Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, to reveal details of the entire war debt negotiations when Parliament reconvenes tomorrow. A "white paper" probably will be published shortly thereafter, giving the background of the situation and details of the Washington discussions.

Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald was received in audience by King George this evening. It was understood he reported on the latest developments in the war debts and disarmament situations.

(Associated Press.)

A small payment by Great Britain, as a token that she owes the United States around $4,000,000,000, and acceptance by the Roosevelt Administration last night seemed likely to be the only result of negotiations just concluded.

Announcement of the token payment is expected today, and on Wednesday Sir Frederick Leith-Ross is expected to leave for London.

Labor Is Firm On Fort Jobs

Union or Nonunion Must Rule at Humphreys, Leaders Say.

Buildings to be erected at Fort Humphreys with Federal recovery funds either will employ union or nonunion bricklayers and stonemasons, but not both, according to an edict issued yesterday by union representatives.

Union men can not work with nonunion men, it was announced yesterday following a conference of Mrs. Eleanor W. Aud, county superintendent of public welfare, and Mrs. Adele Clark, of the State employment service, and representatives of the two trade unions.

The labor men stated that no open-shop policy would be tolerated if any union men were employed. They were willing to cooperate with the county labor but this regulation would not be waived.

Local bricklayers and stonemasons will be given an opportunity to join the union under lenient rules and will be given first consideration. County residents will be given preference with Alexandria and Arlington next.

Mr. Houston remained active until a few days ago.

Born in Fredericksburg, Va., July 4, 1846, he came to Washington as a child. He had seen every inaugural parade from the time of Buchanan to Roosevelt. He sold papers the night of Lincoln's assassination, April 1, 1865.

As a young man he worked in the old Signal office under Brig. Gen. Albert Joseph Myer, and among his duties was that of carrying the daily weather report to hotels, newspaper offices and railroad stations. Later he worked in the Department of Agriculture, Government Printing Office, Postoffice Department, Smithsonian Institution and the Capitol.

Fair NRA Trial Asked by Wallace

neapolis and tomorrow at Des Moines.

Peek at one time was a colleague of Reno on the Committee of Twenty-two, one of the early farm relief groups. Peek also fought for many years to have enacted the so-called McNary-Haugen equalization fee scheme. Although he now is allied with the comparatively more orthodox school of farm relief, Peek remains, because of his past efforts, friendly with the more radical groups. Whether he will go on the stump has not yet been decided.

Secretary Wallace in his address last night contended that in the spring, when Congress set up new machinery to deal with the farm situation, there was general agreement that, due to the desperate situation, "it was the part of intelligence and courage to try new devices where old had failed," and that the new machinery "ought, as a matter of common sense, be given a fair trial."

"Perhaps the time has come for us to say a little more plainly," he continued, "that we believe the new machinery of the National recovery program is worth giving a fair trial. We can insist upon that, it seems to me, without growing fat-headed about it; we can, whenever the facts justify it, admit a mistake, and we can, from time to time admit the necessity for some change in the operation of the machinery.

"But if the principles upon which the new machinery is designed are sound, there is every reason for upholding them long enough to give them a full and fair trial, and for resisting attempts to supplant them with principles and methods we do not and can not believe in."

Since the recovery program started, he went on, the movement has been uneven, first one group spurting ahead, only to suffer a temporary relapse, leaving another group out in front. But such progress was inevitable, Wallace contended.

Recalling that farm prices shot up early in the summer, while wages were lagging behind, Wallace reminded the farmers that then it was labor which complained bitterly. Since the summer, he pointed out, wages have gone up and farm prices have fallen back. The farmers now feel themselves "pinched between the cogs of the new machinry" and "naturally enough" are expressing their distaste.

The conclusion to be drawn from this experience, the Cabinet officer argued, was recognition of the close relationship between factory pay rolls and farm incomes and that "farmers and wage earners must keep step with each other in the march back to prosperity."

In this connection he pointed out that factory pay rolls and farm income since 1923 "have been of about the same stature—each totaled about $11,000,000,000 in 1923, each declined to about $9,500,000,000 in 1930 to about $7,000,000,000 in 1931 and to about $5,000,000,000 in 1932.

Secretary Wallace contended that farm income is now about one-half of what it should be and total labor pay rolls 58 per cent of what they should be. If the NRA increases total pay rolls from 58 to 100 per cent within the next 18 months, he said, explaining he was offering that as a possibility and not prophecy, "it will not be long thereafter until the gross income of farmers is virtually doubled."

Beginning in 1929, he asserted, it took three years for the farmer and the city wage earner "to sink as close to the bottom as it is possible for these two great classes to get without completely disrupting the Nation." He added that "it will take, I fear, at least a couple of years before we can get back to where we were before the depression."

Il Duce Takes Over Air-Navy Cabinet Posts

Premier Supplants Balbo; Defense Unification Plan Seen.

Rome, Nov. 6 (AP).—Premier Mussolini became the head of all armed forces in Italy in name as well as fact today when King Victor Emmanuel gave him the navy and air portfolios in addition to the army ministry.

The immediate result of the cabinet changes, which involved the transfer of Air Marshal Italo Balbo to the governorship of Libya, is expected to be the enactment of measures to intensify and widen the Fascistization of all defense units.

Balbo, one of the new Italy's most colorful figures and the leader of an Italian seaplane armada to Chicago last summer, received the news of his transfer with disappointment.

Unification of the Italian defense units was foreseen eventually through the creation of a single ministry. Besides being the chief of the army, navy and air forces, Mussolini, as head of the Fascist Party, is commander of the Blackshirt militia. As the minister of the interior, he commands the police.

Admiral Giuseppe Sirianni resigned as minister of the navy. To both Balbo and Sirianni Mussolini sent cordial letters of thanks for their cooperation.

McLean Property Guardian Sought

Local Conservator Asked to Replace Bristol.

A suit to have the District Supreme Court appoint a "committee" to look after and conserve the personal estate of Edward B. McLean, who last week was adjudged of unsound mind by a court at Towson, Md., was filed here yesterday.

George B. Fraser, Mr. McLean's personal attorney, filed the petition He named as defendants Admiral Mark L. Bristol, who was appointed by the Maryland court to serve as "committee" for McLean; Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, and the three children of the couple, John R. 2d, Edward B., jr., and Evalyn B. McLean.

The court was asked to select a man to take over all McLean's property here, or at least to appoint a "committee" to serve with Admiral Bristol, on the ground that action of the Maryland court is of no value, since most of the personal estate is located here.

Land Valuation Increased, Gas Experts Admit

Estimates Raised After Conference With Agent of Utility Board.

Gas company land appraisers increased their valuations on the Tenth street office property of the Washington Gas Light Co. after conferences with the appraisal expert hired by the Public Utilities Commission, they testified at valuation hearings before the commission yesterday.

The testimony was developed by questions put by William McK. Clayton, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, to Harold E. Doyle and Charles A. Jones, company appraisers.

Their conferences with commission experts were held in conformity with authorization of the commission last March 12.

Estimate Increased.

Mr. Doyle said he had first valued the land at $16 per square foot, but after conferring with E. Catesby Rowzee, commission appraiser, increased his figures to $20 per foot. Mr. Jones said he also raised his estimate, but he did not say how much.

The land comprises 10,984 square feet. Revision of his estimate increased Mr. Doyle's appraisal by $43,936.

William A. Roberts, counsel for the commission, asked if stenographic reports of the conferences had not been made and whether this did not contain original estimates of all parties. Mr Jones said that was true and the report still was available in commission files.

Testimony Attacked.

Mr. Clayton asked whether it was the practice of appraisers of two sides in condemnation proceedings to confer on their figures. Mr. Jones said it was not.

Cross-examination of Doyle by Roberts was followed by a motion to strike from the record all of his testimony. Mr. Roberts contended the appraisals had not been made by correct methods. The motion was taken under advisement. Hearings are to resume at 10 a. m. today.

Dormant Steel Industry.

Steel ingot production declined to 25 per cent of capacity, as compared with a September average of nearly 41 per cent and a maximum rate of 60 per cent attained last summer. Although the production of steel ingots to date has exceeded the output for the year 1932, in spite of the abnormally low degree of activity during the first quarter of the present year, the immediate outlook is not encouraging.

While uncertainty about the monetary policies of the Administration continues, industrial expansion necessarily will be severely limited. Meantime, the automobile industry, which offers one of the major consumptive outlets for steel products, has satisfied most of its requirements for the time being, while miscellaneous buying of steel by consuming industries has contracted sharply, following a period of relatively heavy purchasing in anticipation of price advances. The chief hope of a stimulus to steel activity in the immediate future, therefore, is based upon railroad buying and acceleration of construction activities, with the aid of Government loans and subsidies.

A speeding up of the public works projects authorized by the Federal Public Works Administration has been mainly responsible for the recent improvement in construction, which, however, is still at an extremely low ebb, with only $122,650,000 of contracts awarded in September and over $60,000,000 of that sum representing public works. Increases in October contracts, too, which are reported to have run well above the low totals of a year ago, are due mainly to public works awards. The allotment of $135,000,000 of Federal funds to the railroads, including $84,000,000 loaned to the Pennsylvania to complete its electrification project and advances for purchases of rails, &c., is expected also to aid the steel industry during the coming weeks. However, the stimulative effect of these Government-financed buying demands will depend largely upon the speed with which the buying program is carried through. If the railroads place their orders over an extended period of months, or if the execution of construction projects lags, the buying demands created by the use of public funds are not likely to make a perceptible impression upon the steel industry.

The depressed condition of the steel industry calls attention to the plight of all those industries which are engaged in supplying durable goods needed for replacement and for expansion of capital equipment. By judicious allocation of public works funds, the Government not only can provide work for men in these industries, but it can perform a useful service to the community by helping to finance the replacement of obsolete and outworn equipment which would have been discarded some time ago if conditions had been normal.

It is obvious, however, that any sums made available from the Federal Treasury in the form of advances would be modest compared with the amounts of capital that the railroads or the construction industry could utilize profitably, if these industries had access to funds in the hands of private investors, as they would ordinarily. Even a generous proportion or the entire amount of the $3,300,000,000 at the disposal of the P. W. A. constitutes a relatively small part of the total of $5,500,000,000 which represents the average value of construction contracts awarded in the years 1923-25. And, needless to say, the P. W. A. is committed to a large number of projects which offer a very limited direct stimulus to the construction industry in relation to the amount of the monetary outlay.

The Railway Age estimates that the deferred maintenance requirements of the railroads during the years of depression have risen to a sum of about $1,200,000,000 for roadway and track, locomotives and freight cars alone. With an estimated decline of $3,000,000,000 in maintenance expenditures, plus deficiencies in outlays for capital improvements, the Railway Age concludes that there has been a total reduction of almost $5,000,000,000 in railway capital and maintenance expenditures as a result of the depression—an amount 50 per cent greater, it is noted, than the entire public works program of the Government.

The needs of the railroads are demonstrated by these figures. The President performed a useful service recently when he settled the controversy regarding the purchase of a large quantity of steel rails and track equipment, but the fundamental problem of stimulating and financing other necessary outlays remains unsolved. Like the building industry and other industries which are consumers of capital goods and create demands for the products of the steel mills, the railroads can not satisfy more than an insignificant fraction of their normal replacement or improvement requirements, as the case may be, by relying upon Government assistance. Hence, until monetary uncertainty is removed and they can turn with assurance to private investors, the steel-using industries will be unable to supply the buying support needed to raise the steel industry itself to a fair level of activity that gives promise of being maintained.

Extradition Nullified.

The courts in Athens in refusing to surrender Samuel Insull to the American authorities, have put a peculiar interpretation upon the extradition treaty between the United States and Greece. If this attitude is to prevail, the State Department has concluded, the extradition treaty will be utterly useless.

Greece has assumed the role of protector over American fugitives from justice. The attitude in Athens is reflected in the following statement by a semi-official Greek newspaper: "Greek justice is entirely independent and the United States Government could never expect Greece to abolish this independence for the sake of the United States, thus violating the protection afforded under our law to a guest on our soil." So long as this attitude prevails an extradition treaty is a farce.

An extradition treaty recognizes the right of each party to execute its own laws. Ordinarily the only question that arises in an extradition case is whether the fugitive is charged with an offense listed in the treaty as "extraditable." The question of innocence or guilt is not involved, since that can not be determined until the accused has been tried in his own country.

The treaty with Greece is similar to those in effect between the United States and other countries. Yet the Greek courts undertook to pass upon the merits of the charges against Insull, assuming, in effect, that he would not obtain a fair trial in the United States and therefore that it became the duty of Greece to protect him. Such a position is obviously untenable. The State Department considers the action of the Greek authorities a clear violation of the treaty, and does not wish to have the United States bound by an agreement to which Greece gives no heed.

Of course, the point at issue is not Mr. Insull's innocence or guilt of the charges against him, but only the right of the United States, under the extradition treaty, to bring him back to this country for trial on those charges. By denying this right the Greek government nullifies the treaty.

Age Limit of Employment.

The ruling of the Civil Service Commission that applicants for certain kinds of Government jobs may not take examinations if they are over 40 years old revives a heated controversy of a few years ago.

At that time some critics of business declared that many firms had an absolute deadline at 40 and would not consider hiring any one in the factory or office who was past that age. Among these critics were Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and Dr. Warren S. Thompson, authority on population problems.

These experts pointed out what they believed to be some serious future consequences of this policy. The birth rate, they said, had fallen ominously in the last 60 years, while the life span of the average person had lengthened considerably. With fewer births and longer lives, it was prophesied that the age-distribution of the population would be radically altered within the next few decades.

Dr. Thompson showed that while in 1860 51 per cent of the population was under 21 years and only 9 per cent over 49, by 1920 only 40 per cent were under 21, while some 17 per cent were over 49. For the year 1975 he estimated that 27 per cent of the Nation's population would be over 49 and 31 per cent under 21 years of age.

According to Dr. Thompson, a 40-year employment deadline in business had been possible because so few people were over that age. Charity had been able to cope with the plight of the unemployed men above this age because of their small number. But he warned that there would soon be a formidable increase of such individuals, and that unless business increased its age limit a great many able-bodied men would be deprived of employment. These men over 40 either would burden business with overhead charges in the form of pensions or would be inadequately cared for. He stressed the unhappiness of elderly able-bodied men who would be denied the opportunity to maintain themselves.

New material for the controversy was supplied by the Columbia psychologist, Edward L. Thorndike, who announced that a series of mental tests had shown that a man of 50 could learn more quickly than a youngster between the ages of 15 and 20. Dr. Thorndike admitted that the point of maximum capacity to learn lay somewhere between the ages of 20 and 25. But he contended that the decline in ability to learn between the ages of 25 and 50 or 60 was comparatively small. The mind, he said, did not dry up as quickly as popular theory had imagined.

And in the Nation-wide discussion that ensued over all this expert opinion, argumentation soared to Socratic heights. The conclusion generally agreed upon is that fitness for employment depends upon the individual, within generous age limitations, and that no arbitrary age deadline can be justly drawn.

Little Dramas of Fascism.

Republics really are not in the running at all. It takes a Fascist nation to provide real sensations. One day Hitlerite Germany announces, with a straight face, a "Chamber of Culture;" next day Italy's Mussolini announces, with an equally straight face, that all bachelors holding executive posts in the Fascist party must either get married right away, or resign.

Now, a country founded on the principle of democracy can not even begin to equal such dramatic innovations. It is bound firmly to popular liberties and to Horace's "golden mean;" if it has spectacular ambitions, it must restrain them. Essentially, it is an unexciting form of government.

And what an unfailing source of excitement these dictatorships are! Take the present case, Mussolini's marriage decree. Think of the Italian diplomatic representatives all over the world who are Fascist party members, and bachelors. Think of the excitement among eligible girls in the countries to which they are accredited. How many hearts must at this very moment be fluttering!

It becomes all the more painful, then, to recall to these fluttering hearts the fact that an Italian decree, published several years ago, prevents Italian diplomats from marrying women of foreign nationality. The reason is obvious: Italy, even as any other nation, does not want its responsible representatives influenced at close range by foreign points of view.

Thus, only Italian girls may lasso those Italian diplomats after all. The men, in order to protect their positions, will have to dash home to Italy for their spouses.

And so the little social bubble bursts.

The Gasoline Tax.

Representative Smith, of Virginia, has announced that he will endeavor to double the gasoline tax in the District at the next session of Congress. Two reasons are given for this undertaking. First, Mr. Smith wants to bring the District tax on gasoline into line with taxes in surrounding territory; second, he would use revenue thus obtained to reduce taxes on real estate.

The interest of Representative Smith in a higher gasoline tax for the District is easily understood. Virginia levies a tax of 5 cents per gallon on gasoline. Consequently, motorists in the vicinity of Washington come here to fill their automobile tanks. The lower tax in the District has been a constant source of annoyance to both Virginia and Maryland authorities. Agitation for higher District levies on motor fuel has been in progress for several years.

Obviously, the gasoline tax here should be fixed at a point where it will serve local needs rather than the convenience of nearby States. Being a metropolitan area, the District does not need to use gasoline tax receipts to build extensive new highway systems. Its requirements in this respect are relatively moderate. A considerable surplus in the gasoline tax fund was built up this year and was released only after much delay through a special order by the director of the budget.

The motive of relieving real estate from burdensome taxation is a worthy one. But that objective would call for a general adjustment of tax levies and an equitable distribution of expenses between the District and Federal governments. It could not be accomplished merely by doubling the gasoline tax.

Bootleg Oil.

The American oil industry is one of the worst sufferers from the operations of bootleggers. Until cooperation between Federal and State authorities was effected the marketing of "hot" oil, in disregard of State and regional quotas, was thoroughly demoralizing to Mid-West markets. Now it is in the field of lubricants that substitution is being practiced to the detriment of trade-mark products.

One large oil concern recently made an investigation of oil sold at filling stations in various cities. The test cars were equipped with a special attachment which carried the oil to a concealed container. Laboratory tests were made to compare this oil with the brand asked for. In 43 per cent of cases some form of substitution had been practiced, and in 18 per cent the motorist had been given a grade different from that requested.

In many instances the substitution was not made for purposes of fraud, but because the dealer did not have the type of oil asked for. More serious, however, is the practice of substituting diluted oil when the customer pays for a specified product of pure quality.

With more than a billion in excess gold coverage at the new valuation it takes a lot of pressure to keep a good dollar down.

Troublesome Malta.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

The little island of Malta, Great Britain's strategic insular fortress in the Mediterranean, is again in revolt and the London government has been forced to dismiss the native cabinet and suspend parliamentary rule. The latest quarrel is over money and language, questions almost as provocative as that of church and state which caused the long-drawn out controversy in 1930. According to the governor general, Sir David Campbell, the colonial government has been too free in its expenditures and has sought to teach Italian in the primary schools contrary to a recent agreement.

It is the language question that is the principal cause of friction. When colonial government was restored last year, it was stipulated that only English and Maltese, a dialect of Carthagenian and Arabic, could be taught in the elementary grades. Italian could be taught in high schools, but it was optional. The government has sought to circumvent this stipulation by wider use of Italian and a campaign to impose the Italian language on the island. The zeal of the minister of education is held responsible for the movement, but the cabinet has supported it. That there shall be no international repercussions, the British government makes it clear that it is a purely local affair.

The religious question, which broke into flame in 1930, resulted in a dispute between Great Britain and the Vatican. One bishop of the island attempted to discipline a Franciscan monk, who happened to be a British subject, by ordering him sent to Italy. The British government protested that the offending monk was being punished for his political beliefs and because he was pro-British. Another bishop urged his flock not to support the government in a local election. Great Britain protested against this as interference of the church in state affairs. At first the Vatican supported the bishops and there was a tiff with the British government, but the controversy was smoothed out.

Parliamentary rule had hardly been restored to the island before the Nationalist regime started the present controversy.

SMALL BUSINESS MAN

He Will Be Crowded to the Wall Unless Helped.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is to become of the small business?

This country has been built up of thousands of small, honest and successful business men. Where are they today? They were not dishonest. They were not lazy. No, they were thrifty. We have had thousands of small business institutions, and successful ones, since 1776. But the greater number of them could not stand the past five years. Look at any city, large or small, in this country. Consolidation has been encouraged in all branches of business, from our banks down. Now, the few small business men who are left who have managed to struggle through these times have entered with heart and soul into the NRA. They are paying their men the code prices, paying 50 per cent more for their materials and trying in turn to get the increased prices for their service or products. But they find that the public has not the money to buy at these prices. That is, prices controlled by large corporations have advanced so rapidly that the small man or the general public hasn't been given the opportunity to get the money to buy at the new high prices. Now the small man has been through five years of hard times and he has no surplus to weather these conditions until things adjust themselves, as I know our President intended to happen, so that everybody would be happy.

As I see it, I pay a few dollars a week more for my labor, but the laborer has not been helped by it because it costs him so much more to live. Furthermore, his hours are shorter, which means that he has more time on his hands to spend his extra dollars.

The small business man in the past has made his money by working from early morning until late at night. His only chance of getting ahead was by his extra efforts, harder work and longer hours. He worked, and he deserved all he got. That was his only way of competing with capital or the big corporations. Now the small business man must pay the laborer more money for shorter hours' work, thereby putting himself in direct competition with the few large, rich corporations with millions of dollars back of them. We can not stand this. We can't last until things are adjusted. The little man must go. Unless he gets some help there will be no small business. Then a few large, rich corporations will control every branch of business under heaven in the United States of America, because they are getting their high prices right now, and we must pay them right now or go out of business.

These small business men were the first to rally to the support of the President and his policies; the first to indorse and bind themselves by the NRA code. As a reward for their support and patriotism are they to be forced out of business?

BICYCLES A DANGER

Reader Says They Should Carry Lights at Night.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Bicycle Accidents" several days ago is timely. There are plenty running around the city after dark without lights, a menace to pedestrians and automobiles alike.

Nothing further is needed but the enforcement of the regulation requiring bicycles to carry a light after dark, as was the custom years ago when police regulations were fairly well enforced.

Today, not only bicycles but automobiles get by without lights as a regular thing at such prominent crossings as Fourteenth and U streets northwest, where one night recently I called a truck driver's attention to the fact that his lights were not on. Right behind me was the crossing policeman, but the autoist took no notice of me, and evidently the policeman took no notice of him. W. E. ALLEN.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY.

This poem, by Stephen Vincent Benet, is a genuine American epic. It was written in France, far away in place and time from the scenes it describes; for, as Mrs. Browning used to say, the poet's imagination is always most present with the distant.

Like classical epics, it opens with an invocation; for it was (rightly) believed that no amount of industry could produce a great poem; the author must primarily depend on inspiration. Thus the Greeks and Romans invoked the Muse of Poetry, Milton invoked the Holy Spirit, and Tennyson invoked the Son of God. Mr. Benet has a beautiful invocation to the American Muse. In sheer poetical values, there is no other part of the poem with a higher elevation.

As a boy, Mr. Benet lived in Pennsylvania and in Georgia; he knew the Northern and the Southern points of view. Thus in this epic, Gen. Lee and Gen. Jackson are presented as sympathetically as President Lincoln and Gen. Grant.

The scenes at Harper's Ferry describing the days that preceded the execution of John Brown are among the most dramatic pages of the book. When Brown was offered an opportunity to escape, he replied, with that uncanny prophetic gaze in the future with which madmen are sometimes gifted, that his death was of more value to the cause than his life.

It never pays to give the other side the asset of a martyr; Nathaniel Hawthorne, of Massachusetts, said at the very time when his neighbor, Emerson, was comparing Brown with the Saviour on the cross, "Nobody was ever more justly hanged." He added that it would have better if Virginia had forgotten the "criminality of his attempt in its enormous folly."

Just as the most exciting way to read English history is in Shakespeare's historical plays, so there is no more thrilling narrative of our years of internal strife than Mr. Benet's poem.

Tomorrow—Drifting and Steering.

If You Need More Power, Why Trust a Motor That Never Has Given Service?

By Robert Quillen.

You can't judge the worth of an idea by the number of people who accept it. But, when the thinking people of a nation are almost unanimous in supporting a proposition, it is usually sound and logical.

At present these people seem to agree that economic recovery could be hastened by increasing the Nation's supply of money.

What would happen if all nations should demonetize gold? All national reserves and all paper based on gold would be worthless and the world would be pauperized.

As loss of gold's value would make the world poor, so any increase of gold would make it richer. This was demonstrated when another period of depression was ended by the discovery of new gold fields.

If that is true—if it is possible to make times good by increasing the supply of money—why not make ourselves rich by the simple process of engraving a few billion paper dollars?

Because people are not so easily fooled. You can't make them believe a worthless check is good merely by affixing a label that reads: "This is a good check."

When they demand more money, they mean sound money.

All experience has shown that the printing of fiat money makes times bad instead of good. The public soon loses faith in it. And no money is good unless people believe it is good.

How then, can the Government increase the supply of sound and acceptable money?

Well, you probably have in your possession a few half dollars, quarters and dimes. Isn't it good money?

For ages the world has considered silver only one degree less precious than gold. More than a billion of the world's people still prefer silver money.

If other nations refuse to monetize silver—say in the ratio of 10 to 1 or 20 to 1—why should America follow their example?

Making silver "as good as gold" might enrich China and Mexico and India, but would America suffer any ill effect if foreign lands were suddenly enabled to buy a few billion dollars' worth of her goods?

If we need more money and people distrust paper and have faith in silver, it shouldn't be difficult to find a way to supply the need.

Press Comment

President or Congress?
Boston Transcript.

How far does the Administration trust Congress in the preparation of legislation? In particular, how far will this trust go in the months to come, when the second session of the Seventy-third Congress is under way? The question is suggested by conditions in the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, which body desires to conduct its own investigations and frame its own bills, whereas the Administration shows a disposition to write its own measures for control of the stock exchanges, and ask only of the committee the rubber-stamp function of putting it through. The same procedure, it is expected, will apply in other matters, in which the Administration will map out its course and bid Congress to follow it, on pain of political disfavor.

John Barleycorn a Puzzle.
Kennebec Journal.

The press is receiving daily reminders of the job that is in the shaping, as State after State records disapproval of Federal prohibition. It needs these reminders that the nature of John Barleycorn has not changed and is a public nuisance, in fact, a menace. At large, he inevitably becomes an object of public concern. Federal prohibition is being thrust aside, in the opinion that there are better ways for dealing with John. Now that the time approaches for applying such methods there is more or less confusion respecting them.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

AFTER THE EAGLE.

The Blue Eagle is now fighting to keep the eggs from being scrambled. Up to the last month or so everybody was his friend. Today he is being made as uncomfortable as a duck in a shooting gallery.

• • • •

Many of the boys who were cheering him in August as a friend in need are now trying to drive him off the nest for obstructing traffic.

• • • •

It was bound to happen. The crowd always shouts, "Take him out!" when the pitcher has a bad inning, no matter how great a ball game he has been pitching up to that moment.

• • • •

The fact that the Blue Eagle is now under criticism is the best proof that things are picking up. You never criticize the life guard's looks until after he has dragged you ashore.

• • • •

And it is only after somebody has rescued you from going over Niagara Falls on a raft that you get the idea you might have gone over safely and landed a vaudeville contract in the bargain.

• • • •

America is not only the home of the brave and the land of the free. It is the bungalow of the second-guesser and the hemisphere of the impatient. We're with any movement until it makes us wait for the green light.

• • • •

Last March the national cry was "Throw out the lifeline!" Today it's surprising how many people you hear shouting "Throw out the life guard!"

• • • •

Six months ago they were calling, "Help, or I perish!" Today they are yelling, "Let me go! I'm a long distance swimmer."

• • • •

All America seemed to go along with NRA as long as we were scared stiff, but now that our hair is no longer on end we are throwing out our chests and boasting about where we would be if nobody had interfered.

• • • •

What the President is hearing today is the Forgotten Skeptic. The Blue Eagle didn't prove to be a combination bird of paradise, miracle man and Santa Claus, so the dead cat barrage is on as predicted.

• • • •

Admittedly the Blue Eagle has his failings and may not be able to do all that was expected of him, but he's better company than the big, bad wolf.

• • • •

Just Folks.

Tea and Toast.

Oh, time may bring troubles and time may bring tears,
And nobody knows what awaits down the years.
The gift of old age must be purchased with pain,
And leaving and losing the joys we may gain,
But there's always a mem'ry to cling to and keep
To balance the sorrows that cause us to weep.
So writing these few feeble verses I am
To tea and to toast and to strawberry jam.

The feasts I like best are those gay little teas
When with friends we are fond of we sit at our ease,
And the laughter rings out at some jest that is told
As we reach for the butter as yellow as gold.

Then our hearts and our minds from suspicion are free,
Shut away from the world and its heartaches are we,
Just good friends together, devoid of all sham,
Drinking tea, eating toast spread with strawberry jam.

There are some who may say that but folly is this,
That life give us mem'ries of much greater bliss,
But I run them all over and sift them all through,
To find my joy linked to my good friends and true.
Not the feast after conquest I haste to recall,
Nor the banquet attended in some gilded hall,
But to those glad occasions I bow and salaam,
Those suppers of tea, toast and strawberry jam.

Federal Crime Jurisdiction.
New Bedford Standard-Times.

In its crime policy, says Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, America has been chasing its own tail. It has never caught up, and will not until a Constitutional amendment enables the Federal Government's long arm to cross State lines, backed either by concurrent jurisdiction with State courts or by original jurisdiction in the case of the graver felonies.

Whether an amendment is necessary is a question, since crimes of this description generally have an interstate character.

Debuchi Bids Hull Farewell; To Sail Nov. 30

(Associated Press.)

Ambassador Debuchi of Japan, who has been recalled to Tokyo, said farewell to Secretary Hull yesterday.

He will not leave for Japan until late this month, but as the Secretary of State will be busy with the Litvinoff negotiations beginning today and will leave for the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo, November 11, Mr. Debuchi arranged to have his final visit at the State Department yesterday.

The Ambassador told newspapermen he had not been advised of the identity of his successor.

"I had no official business of any sort to take up with Mr. Hull," he added. "I merely called to say goodby and to thank him for the many courtesies he has shown me."

The Ambassador will go to New York tomorrow for two days of conferences with Japanese business men and a farewell visit to Japanese consular officials.

He will leave Washington with his family for San Francisco, November 24. He will sail November 30 for Yokohama on the steamer Asama.

'Santa Claus' Farley Distributes Jobs

Postmaster General James A. Farley plans to play Santa Claus this Christmas to a lot of unemployed.

Orders have just gone out from Farley's office that all postmasters are to "employ to the fullest possible extent" unemployed men and women having dependents to aid in the Christmas rush. Local organizations will be called upon to furnish names and credentials of deserving applicants.

Pay will be approximately 55 cents an hour and the extra workers will be limited to 10 hours a day. In addition, Farley has decreed that every effort must be made to have deliveries effected before Christmas day so employes can have turkey dinners at home.

Death Lurks Above Cities In Invisible Chemical Fog

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—There is still death in the invisible chemical fog hanging over cities, possibly even a cancer irritant, the New York Academy of Medicine was told tonight.

This report was made by H. B. Meller, air pollution expert, of Mellon Institute. He urged the medical profession to clean up what he called the "atmospheric sewage."

"In view of the fact," he said, "that an amazing drop in the death rate in cities has been gained despite the persistence of air pollution, it may be thought in some quarters that atmospheric contamination has been overemphasized as an agency inimical to health.

"But a close examination of the statistics develops some interesting findings. The major portion of the gain in city health has been made during the five bright months of the year. In those months city death rates drop below the rural rates. But in the seven darker months city death rates uniformly exceed the rural rates.

"Fatalities from cancer are more numerous in the seven darker months and the suggestion of their association with concentrations of tarry soot apparently has been strengthened by the recent identification of cancer—inducing substances in tar.

"Under present ordinances only such smoke as is so dense that the stream is opaque as it leaves the stack is prohibited. Smoke less dense is permitted, as are emission of coke particles, cinders, ash high in silicia, unburned oil and sulfur gases."

Paris Lines Trim, Says 5-10 Heiress

Princess Mdivani in U. S. With Her Husband.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani came home today with her German nobleman, a slim waistline and a pronouncement that the buxom styles of America had not reached the boulevards of Paris.

"Paris dresses are just the same," said Princess Barbara.

"I am very, very happy,"—the heiress to the Woolworth five-and-ten fortune smiled when she said it.

Her husband—Prince Alexis Mdivani—agreed.

It is their first visit to the United States since their marriage in Paris last June.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Miss Israel Devoted to Children's Relief.

It might be said that golf is the vocation and welfare work the avocation of Miss Bertha R. Israel, formerly chairman of the board of the Juanita K. Nye Council House, and a member of the boards of the Jewish Foster Home and the Jewish Welfare Federation. Miss Israel is also a devoted worker for the Community Chest and a firm believer in its economical method of financing welfare agencies.

As chairman of the board of the Juanita K. Nye Council House, Miss Israel was responsible for a number of changes for the better at this settlement and as the community chest campaign draws near, even a golf course ceases to have any temptation for this earnest worker. She expresses her interest in welfare work as follows:

"I have always been interested in welfare work. As a matter of fact, I can usually be found either on a golf course or doing some welfare work.

"I first became interested in welfare work during the World War. At that time I was living in Reading, Pa. I became assistant director of the Supply Department of the Red Cross there and was later decorated by the Red Cross for having given the greatest number of hours for volunteer work.

"My greatest interest in welfare work is with those agencies dealing with children. I feel that if children are directed properly it is valuable influence upon them later in life.

"I am a firm believer that the routine of welfare work is best carried on by paid workers, for they are trained for the work and are better able to handle any situation that might arise. At the same time I think that it is quite necessary that there are volunteer workers, who in their way help to keep the interest of the individual agencies alive."

Spirit Must Illumine Beauty Resulting From Outward Symmetry of Form

Crepe Evening Ensembles Low Priced, Lovely

Pumpkin Crepe and Pleated Flounces on Slim Skirt One Model.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Consider the short life of the evening gown. After it has been given a whirl in several of the smartest night clubs and has appeared at a formal dinner or two, its owner declares that "she simply will not be seen in that old wreck again." The usual procedure after this vehement declaration is to sally forth in quest of a brand-new gown.

Often the woman who dances and dines almost nightly picks up several inexpensive dresses in the course of the season. She knows by experience that after an evening gown has been seen a few times it is "old stuff." Then there is the woman who goes so seldom that it is wildly extravagant for her to invest much money in a formal costume that will spend most of its time languishing in the clothes closet.

For both types of women the shopper has found good news in the shape of stunning crepe evening ensembles, reasonably priced. A white one is especially appealing with tailored revers on the V neck in front and a hand-finished crepe flower at the top of the Vionnet bodice. The back is cut in a deep V, the waistline is defined with a narrow belt, and the floor length skirt has fullness concentrated in the back. There's a smart hip length swagger jacket to wear with the gown. The fairly full long sleeves have interesting shirred epaulets. This ensemble may be had in dusty pink as well as white. Sizes are from 11 to 20. The price is $8.95.

The same department store has another lovely evening model in white or pumpkin crepe, also priced at $8.95. Two narrow pleated flounces are at the bottom of the long slim skirt. The pleated flounce idea is repeated in sleevelets on the bolero jacket which has a student collar. The gown's bodice is cut cowl in front and pointed in back. A narrow belt encircles the waist. Sizes are from 11 to 20.

Giving oneself a manicure is enjoyable as well as economical when the manicure doodads are cozily packed in a handsome bakelite box. The lid is brilliant green, while the rectangular box is shiny black. The kit contains two shades of liquid polish, cuticle remover, polish remover, a jar of nail white, an emery board, an orange stick, and a roll of cotton. This manicure set which sells for $1.00 has been placed on the market by one of the better cosmetic manufacturers. It would thrill any sweet young thing to find the black and green bakelite box in her stocking on Christmas morning.

A trained seal in the home is really very nice, providing it is trained to hold a bowl of ivy on its funny, slippery nose. Lacquered composition makes the seal look glisteningly life-like. The clear glass globe-shaped bowl is large enough to hold long tendrils of ivy, wandering jew or other vines.

The seal may be had in black or white. The price of $1 includes the bowl.

The return of beer spurred manufacturing activity in many lines, so we're constantly being told. Well, we've found evidence of at least one instance: The making of beer coasters.

We don't know what connection birds have with beer, but these particular coasters have a flashing red bird on top their shiny pyroxylin surface. Pyroxylin is washable as well as waterproof.

The artisan who designed them gave them generous proportions so that large steins may be placed upon them and still have a bit of coaster to spare. Octagonal shaped, they may be had in silver, blue, green, white or yellow. Eight coasters, wrapped in cellophane, cost 39 cents.

Here's a traveling case that is different. Instead of being lumpy and bulging, it is trim and flat, resembling a deep pocketbook. Silk moire, rubber lined, is the good-looking material which is attacked to a silvery metal frame. Five rubber pockets, for bottles and jars and washcloth, are inside the bag.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Fortune Teller.

Your eyes across the table
Smiled at me,
The gypsy told the secret
Of the tea.

And from the cup she drew each
Why and how,
And when and where of future
Love—but now.

I count the dragging moments
As I sup
Alone—and find no fortune
In my cup.

Famed for Loveliness

The fragile symmetry of Marlene Deitrich's exquisite face (above) belongs to the exotic type, say beauty authorities, who define Sylvia Sidney (below) as the personification of innocence. Claudette Colbert is the piquante.

Yearning for Beauty, and Appreciation of Beautiful Surroundings Can Aid Even the Plain Woman in Manifesting Her Natural Charm of Mind.

Whether beauty can exist apart from classic perfection of profile and of figure is one of the questions most important to the woman who would seek to make the most of her personal allure.

The Woman's Page assigned Elizabeth Young to put to prominent authorities this and many other questions on the realization of beauty. Following is the second of a series of articles revealing their replies.

By Elizabeth Young.

It is perfectly possible to attract, to charm, even to fascinate, without having a classic profile or perfect bodily proportions.

Beauty is a matter of effect and impression; the effect secured for oneself, the impression made on others.

Such is the concensus of opinion of national authorities on beauty, interviewed in the Nation's Capital in the course of an intensive study into what constitutes beauty in women.

These authorities, some of whose opinions were briefly cited yesterday, classify beauty in 12 great master types. Each type, complete in itself, embodies perfect beauty of a kind, dependent not alone on color and symmetry, but animated as well by spiritual and intellectual qualities.

Inward Qualities Expressed.

Through studying these types, not alone in their outward configuration but in their essence, each woman may learn those qualities existing within herself which she must express in realizing to the fullest her own particular beauty.

Briefly reviewed the first six of these types are:

The dynamic, gifted with boundless vitality, emanating the charm of excitement; the intellectual, subordinating all else to the projection of mental force; the spiritual, wistful, gentle, detached from what is defined as wordly preoccupation; the sophisticated, presenting the veneer of a delightful exterior, moving in complete cognizance of every social nuance; the ingenue, who has the charm of naive, unspoiled enthusiasm; the flower, modest, sweet, with a rare untouched virginal quality lasting through life.

The second six of the twelve types selected by the experts are:

The Siren.

7. The universal woman, to every man the image of his heart's desire; to every woman the wisdom of Eve.

The Exotic.

8. The orchid-like woman to whom life involuntarily concedes luxury as her due.

The Piquante.

9. The woman whose impish sense of humor is reflected in arrestingly unusual features.

The Innocent.

10. She rests utterly on some protective force, and suggests a vulnerability too precious to violate.

The Gamin.

11. She accepts the world as her oyster, and reacts with lovable spontaneity and impulsiveness.

The Wholesome.

12. Her charm lies in her sincerity, her maternal quality, the merging of her identity in the lives of those about her.

In order that these definitions of multiform beauty be most readily grasped, beauty authorities have selected outstanding lovely women of the stage, to identify with each type.

The first six types were identified in yesterday's article, with Joan Crawford as the dynamic; Ruth Chatterton as the intellectual; Loretta Young as the spiritual; Kay Francis as the sophisticated; Janet Gaynor as the ingenue, and Wynn Gibson as the flower.

The Seventh type, the siren, is Greta Garbo. The complete woman, she challenges the eye and the imagination, and is to each a different thing. She is the feminine question mark to every man. She intrigues every woman with the enigma of her allure.

Orchid of the Drawing Room.

Flashing humor lighting her roguish countenance, Claudette Colbert is the piquante type.

Sylvia Sidney, whose soft, wide eyes and tremulous mouth seem to solicit a necessary protection, is the innocent type.

The gamin is Lupe Valez, whose madcap diablerie of personality is reflected in expression and features.

Mary Brian is the wholesome type, disarming everyone by her sincerity, her warm sympathy, her interest in the welfare of all whom she contacts. She suggests sunshine and health and self-forgetfulness.

Yearning Is Beauty.

"* * * Beauty * * * is in the largest sense * * * the yearning for it, the natural pride of good work of brains and hands * * *" wrote the great English novelist, John Galsworthy.

Mrs. William Kendrick Phillips, presiding spirit of Washington's School for Charm in Stoneleigh Courts, agreed with his statement.

"Beauty can be developed," she declared. "The development of beauty begins with a realization of its lack. It can be built in three ways; the physical, the spiritual, and the mental. Charm is the coordination of these three in equal parts. To be physically beautiful alone is not enough. Such beauty satisfies only the eye.

"Spiritual beauty, while perhaps the most difficult to attain, is the most important, and is more compelling in itself than either physical or mental beauty. It is ageless. Quietude is necessary to spiritual beauty, self-discipline, good breeding. The cultivation of appreciation of beauty gives spiritual poise; the acquired ability to see things from the other side of the canvas; the growth of sympathy for the other person's point of view, while maintaining one's own code of ethics.

"To be freed from preoccupation with self is to have mental poise."

Senor Cesareo Dernaldo de Quiros, Argentine painter of beautiful women in many countries, feels it every woman's obligation to be as beautiful as possible. This she accomplishes, in his opinion, by draping her physical being in beautiful line and color, while laying her spirit bare. The spirit can manifest itself only through spontaneity of being, he insists.

"Spontaneity adds most to potential beauty. In spontaneity all potential beauty is expressed. Whether a woman belongs to the sophisticated type, whether she be siren or gamine, if she is altogether spontaneous, she is always altogether beautiful in adapting herself to the moment.

"She may have within herself the range of many beauties. In a moment of declaring her love, the spontaneous woman will be the siren; as she responds to beautiful music, she becomes completely spiritual.

"To deliberately confine herself to any role or type is to hold herself back from the multiform beauty which may possibly be hers," the painter declared. "Every woman should learn what is the type of beauty most natural to her. She should not attempt to conform to any type alien to her, nor should she be unduly influenced by mode or modiste.

"Each age has it s own range of beauty. Beauty progresses like life, and in expressing itself must take on the color of progressive experience. Beauty, like life, is transitive, and undergoes transformation without losing its essence. Youth, which in itself constitutes beauty, is like the bud; in maturity, there should be the beauty of the flower in full bloom."

Mrs. Frederic Ernest Farrington, mistress of Chevy Chase School for Girls, believes simply that beauty is achieved through contemplating and appreciating beauty.

Inner Light Illumines.

"People of intelligent perceptions may be likened to a stained glass window. The design and color is there, waiting for the illumination of the light from within. Beauty without light is dead. Beauty is attained by studying beauty in every form—in nature, in art, in literature, in music; by getting in contact with all the beauty one can find in the world.

"I have seen the plainest girls become perfectly, radiantly beautiful in a couple of years, through developing that light within. I feel that each of us was created with some special mission to perform. In finding that mission, in wakening to the realization, 'I am prepared for life,' one sets the torch to that inner flame.

"To have real, lasting beauty, one must have a cultural and spiritual education. Particularly, a spiritual consciousness, which has nothing to do with religion as we define it. Spiritual consciousness is a feeling of actual kinship to the most beautiful things in nature and human endeavor. Spiritual life is beauty: Real, vital, tangible beauty."

Foundation in Serenity.

"Beauty is infinitely more than skin deep," declared Mme. L. de Sokoloff, Washington cosmetician and skin specialists, whose knowledge of skin care and skilful ministrations have enhanced the loveliness of women on two continents.

"Beauty is something of a thought. A conviction of beauty is necessary, in seeking to attain desired beauty, or in perfecting beauty already possessed.

"I believe beauty has its foundation in a serene mind, a healthy body, and exquisite cleanliness."

"A woman must be intrigued with her own appearance," Mme. de Sokoloff explained, "she must have a conviction of her own importance as an individual, in order to build her beauty to its fullest realization."

Mammy at White House Aided First Lady

The approach of the first state reception at the White House this season means "trains" with a big "T."

The pomp of Old World courts is lacking at White House receptions, of course, but the court trains usually worn by the First Ladies add a touch of the regal to the brilliant scene.

One night when Mrs. Coolidge swept down the staircase on the arm of the silent "Cal" those standing near the foot of the stairs saw a touching sight. A smiling, middle-aged Negro woman in black dress and embroidered cap and apron stepped quickly forward and straightened out the train which had become a bit rumpled in the passage down the stairs.

Culbertson's Bridge

Squeezing Out Grand Slams.

Unquestionably, one effect of Howell match-point play at Bridge is to make its devotees "notrump conscious." Many of them seek to find ways to play hands at notrump that are absolutely safe at a suit declaration, because of the slight increase in points which frequently spells the difference between a top-score and merely an average or worse-than-average score. Those who play this form of the game must expect this development, illogical as it is, but I believe a player is carrying it too far to choose a contract in notrump in preference to one in a major suit when it reaches the height of a Grand Slam, as almost any player who bids a Grand Slam and makes it, whether in a suit or notrump, is reasonably well assured of a good score in any event.

This story, however, is of a hand played at a Grand Slam in notrump—a hand which brought to its player an opportunity for a squeeze to develop the thirteenth trick, which was available without either squeeze or finesse if the hand had been played at its normal contract of seven spades.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

1—South elects to bid the considerably shaded spade suit because the hand, after all, is very strong, and he has no objection, if North also has a strong hand, to being forced up in the bidding.
2—A Forcing Takeout on this hand fails to picture its great honor strength. North knows there is a game in the hand and is reasonably sure of a Slam.
3—A further show of strength.
4—There is a slight danger that this bid may be passed, as North knows that South's spade suit must be lacking in honors. However, North has great confidence in his partner and decides to take the slight risk for the chance of obtaining the vital information.
5—South accepts the invitation. He knows that the hands contain a minimum of 7½ honor-tricks, and while he is not at all in love with the distribution, still he feels that a Slam try should be made.
6—Disclosing the possession of the remaining Aces.
7—South's bid of six spades is, of course, much stronger than six clubs—perhaps too strong in view of the previous bidding.
8—North reasons that they must have five spade tricks, a minimum of three club tricks, as South is marked with the King, two or three diamonds—a total of 13. At worst, the Grand Slam would appear to depend upon a finesse or a squeeze, as the running of the top-card tricks must put the adversaries in trouble.

West's Opening lead was a heart, and South, counting his tricks, could see only 12 in sight. The thirteenth might be developed by a successful diamond finesse or, even more remotely, a double club finesse, if the club suit failed to break 3-3. In order to gain some information, after winning the first trick with the heart King he immediately took four rounds of spades. West was forced to find two discards and found himself at once in trouble. He first parted with a heart and next gave up a diamond as South's second bid had indicated that it would be advisable to retain a stopper in the club suit. East was also forced to discard and, unwilling to give any information as regards the diamond suit, in which a possible finesse existed, he dropped one club. South now led two rounds of clubs, winning the first with the Queen in Dummy and the second in his own hand, and learned that the club suit would not break. He next followed with the Ace and Queen of hearts, discarding the 9 of diamonds from the Dummy.

On the last lead of hearts West's hand was clearly revealed. He still retained two clubs; hence could have remaining but two diamonds at the most, and if his hand contained the remaining heart, he had only one. The Declarer now had no option but to lead diamonds, and when the Queen dropped on the second round his troubles were over.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

If November 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 9 a. m., from 11:35 a. m. to 12:10 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:20 to 11:15 a. m., from 1 to 2:30 p. m. and from 9:15 to 9:55 p. m.

It will be difficult to get the "right slant" on things on this date, and if you are not mighty careful you will make decisions that will place you in a funny light. You will find trouble wherever you look for it on this day, especially in the home, where everything will seem to be topsy-turvy. Not a day for rest.

The child born on this November 7 will have a kindly word for everyone as he goes along.

If November 7 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely the type of person who takes entirely too great an interest in yourself and in your own problems. You do not have a very vivid imagination nor are you much interested in the things that go on about you. You are quite lacking in ambition. As long as you have all that is necessary to your immediate comfort you are satisfied and quite willing to sit dreamily and see what is coming your way. When things go wrong, you are not the kind who complains, but you do let a lot of fear creep into your thought.

Born on November 7, you are one who likes to have everyone in on your personal and business affairs; you like to "talk things over" with this and that person and see how they feel on the matter.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Give Lessons In Government

Will Go to New York to Lecture Before Junior League's Society Girls.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will reassume the role of school teacher while she instructs New York society buds in the sterner implications of the Federal Government's new activities.

The First Lady announced at her press conference yesterday that she will go to New York to deliver a series of lectures to the members of New York's smart Junior League.

The course, which will begin Wednesday, will continue until the first of March. Although the President's wife will be unable to attend every week, she is planning to make a trip to New York at least once a month to give the student society girls the very latest developments in Washington.

Her first lecture, on Wednesday of this week, she said, will be an outline of the proposed course of study. She will list the various emergency organizations set up by her husband since he entered the White House last March and will sketchily outline the functions of each.

The following lectures will amplify these outlines and will be kept up to the minute as the Federal organizations undertake new projects with their present programs.

Although these classes have been conducted for several years, this is the first time the directors have been so ambitious as to undertake a series on the Federal Government, said Mrs. Roosevelt.

In the past they have dealt with city and State governments, and general local problems of government. It was suggested to Mrs. Roosevelt that the course of study progress as she and her husband progressed up the ladder of public office.

"Well, I don't know about that," replied the First Lady, smiling broadly.

Mrs. Roosevelt concluded her press conference with a plea that publicity be given to the fact that there are no White House "social lists."

She pointed out that her mail every day brought her innumerable letters with requests that the writers be put on the White House lists for certain social receptions.

"For years it has been the custom to invite certain people to certain receptions," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Of course we shall continue this practice. But there are no White House lists and there is no set formula for inclusion in these receptions."

Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Hughes Opera Club Patronesses

Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Senator Thomas P. Gore and Mrs. Gore, Senator Elmer Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Mr. Justice and Mrs. Jesse Adkins are among those in official circles of the Capital City who are included in the list of distinguished patrons and patronesses for the Washington Opera Club's performances of "The Chimes of Normandy," in Roosevelt Auditorium, Monday and Tuesday nights, November 27 and 28.

Bernard Fay Will Present Continental View of New Deal.

Bernard Fay, so-called unofficial French Ambassador to this country and biographer of Franklin, has written—"Roosevelt and His America"—which Little Brown will bring out the twenty-fourth of this month. It will probably be translated and printed in France, for it is an attempt to interpret the New Deal for continental minds.

The success of the movie has induced Garden City Publishing Co. to change the title of Francis Hackett's "Henry, the Eighth," for its forthcoming dollar edition, to "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth."

A cruise of 13,000 miles, made when he was 13 years old, is narrated by Gifford Bryce Pinchot, 15-year-old son of the Governor of Pennsylvania, in "Giff and Stiff in the South Seas." Just published by Winston and chosen as the book of the month by the Junior Literary Guild, it tells of his adventures when he visited Galapagos and the South Sea Islands in company with his father and "Stiff," the son of Public Service Commissioner Stahlnecker, of Pennsylvania. About a year ago, movies taken on this cruise were being widely shown.

"Learning alone has little value; a man may know by heart the 200 Spanish name-colors of horses and yet be easily tumbled off by any old brood mare."

"See that no flies alight within thy mouth; an open mouth and a riata loop around thy neck are twins."

"The suspicions of a sow are what those of every man should be; they do not diminish digestion and interfere little with sleep, but leave few possibilities unconsidered."

Ex-Light-Writer.

A novel, "THE TUMULT AND THE SHOUTING," by Ursula Parrott; Longmans, Green, $2.50.

This story of four generations is so much better than Ursula Parrott's first book, "Ex-Wife," that one can hardly believe the same person could have written both.

In order to meet popular demand it is no longer necessary for authors to produce sensational narratives at the expense of good writing.

Miss Parrott, by keeping abreast of the times, has improved her style, her organization of material, and her character delineations to a remarkable degree. This does not mean, however, that those readers—and certainly there were many of them, judging from the sale of her other books—who found "Ex-Wife," "Strangers May Kiss," and "Love Goes Past" to their liking will not enjoy this book. Far from it. "The Tumult and the Shouting" has every quality that made Miss Parrott's previous novels big sellers, and it is more finished than anything she has ever written.

Before this, Miss Parrott has devoted herself to portraying modern people confronted wtih ultra-modern problems, which had to be solved in the fashionable manner. But this novel, beginning in 1877 and coming on down to the present, admirably demonstrates the author's ability to interpret other generations, as well as her own.

The central figure of the book, Dr. Michael Gavin, had just finished medical school at the beginning of the book. His practice in Boston, his love affair and marriage, his son's tragic death, and the incidents in the life of his grand-daughter, Carol, form the basis of the story, which is at once an emotionally moving narrative and an impressive comparison of the youth of three generations. The latter part of the book, in which Carol is an outstanding character, is a terse depiction of the modern generation which has traded the faith of its forefathers for a sense of the futility of living. Carol eventually arrives at a solution for her problems, even though the conclusion of the narrative is not as convincing as the rest. Herein lies the only glaring weakness of this carefully worked-out novel. But in view of the fact that the narrative is otherwise satisfactory, we can forgive the author for not making the concluding chapter as strong as it might be.

"The Tumult and the Shouting," for which Kipling's "Recessional" has furnished the title, will be enjoyed even by many who have not particularly cared for Miss Parrott's other novels.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

Choir Boy Reporter Got Scoop on Papal Blessing

International marriages have always been big social events in Washington. The wedding of Miss Margaret Draper, daughter of the late American Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William F. Draper, to Prince Boncompagni attracted much newspaper publicity.

An enterprising New York paper got a reporter into the wedding in the shape of a choir boy with a nose for news. While the boys chanted the nuptial music this lad was taking in every detail of the scene.

The climax came when he picked up a cablegram lying on a cabinet. It was written in Latin, and, when translated, it was found to contain the papal blessing on the newly wedded pair.

So the papal blessing appeared in full in the New York newspaper. High church officials must have puzzled greatly about the source of the paper's information.

Meanwhile Master Choir Boy was treating his singing comrades to lollipops for an entire week out of his ill-gotten funds.

What's Good to Eat

Pancakes With Sausage and Bacon Potent for Pepping Up First Meal

By Ann Barrett.

Perhaps it's bacon and pancakes that gladden up the morning meal for you. (The combination that starts Ruth Etting's day off with a song.) Or maybe you agree with Rudy Vallee that good pancakes are hot stuff any time.

At any rate, pancakes—but with emphasis on the good, you notice. So how do griddle cakes get good? Well, you likely know the trick of getting them good (and quick) out of packages — ready-mixed except for milk. But if you'd rather whip them up yourself, from the beginning, here are some favorite ways to make them good and give yourself a break on variety, too.

Yeast Buckwheat Cakes.

For instance, old-fashioned yeast buckwheat cakes that find double favor when they're made this quicker, easier way: First, dissolve ½ compressed yeast cake with 1 tablespoon brown sugar in 1 cup lukewarm water and ½ cup milk (first scalded, then cooled to lukewarm). Then combine 1 cup sifted buckwheat flour, ½ cup sifted bread flour, ¾ teaspoon salt. Gradually stir this into first mixture and beat till smooth. Cover with towel and set in warm place till light (about 1 hour). Then stir up again, and bake.

Crumb Pancakes.

Crumb cakes made with sour milk are easy eating, too. Here's how on them: Put 1 cup fine, dry crumbs to soak for an hour or so in 2 cups thick, sour milk (or buttermilk.) Then stir into them a mixture of ½ cup sifted bread flour, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar. Last, add 1 egg (well-beaten) and 1 tablespoon melted butter.

Cornmeal Cakes.

Another time, when you want cakes particularly nice and crispy from the cornmeal that's in them, try these: Mix and sift ¾ cup cornmeal, 1¼ cups sifted bread flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ tablespoon sugar. Then stir this into 1 egg (well-beaten) and combined with 1½ cups milk. Last, add 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Rice Pancakes.

Almost anything can get to be a pancake, it seems. Here's rice playing the pancake role so delicately. Rice pancakes are often featured for dessert at lunch or supper, served with good maple syrup or melted currant jelly.

For these, you start with 1¼ cups hot boiled rice. Combine with ¼ teaspoon salt, 1¼ cups milk and 1 egg yolk, well beaten. Next stir in 1¼ cups sifted bread flour mixed with 2½ teaspoons baking powder. Last, fold in 1 egg white, stiffly beaten.

Plain Sour-Milk Cakes.

Now, just in case you haven't a recipe for sour-milk pancakes—plain, but very good—here's a humdinger: Combine 2 cups sifted bread flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar and sift again. Then beat an egg, add 2½ cups sour milk or buttermilk; stir in the flour mixture, add 1 tablespoon melted shortening and bake.

Send for Icing Recipes.

There's a different kind of cake that's more and more in demand as the holiday party season comes on—the layer cake that's so lusciously iced your mouth waters just to see it. It's these popular icings I've put into my brand new 5-page bulletin, "Knacks of Making Perfect Frostings and Fillings." Send 6 cents in loose stamps, with self-addressed envelope and coupon below, for the bulletin.

The Family Marketer

"What's that dark sausage?" asked the Marketer.

The market man was expansive.

"That's blood puddin', ma'am—makes you walk in your sleep."

"Why does it make you walk in your sleep?" the Marketer wanted to know.

"Aw, I'm jist kiddin'—it's real good, though. What's life without kiddin'? You just can't believe ennything I say, ma'am. I'm kiddin' all th' time!"

The pudding is 15 cents a pound. Spiced ham loaf, fancy, is 50 cents a pound; hogshead cheese, 25 cents; chicken loaf, 40 cents a pound.

The Marketer has a particular partiality to cheeses. Whenever she dines out she orders cheese for dessert, and the other day she found a real surprise. Try it yourself, you cheese addicts. Make a mixture of grated American cheese, mild, some cream cheese to hold the mixture together, a dash of Roquefort for puquancy, chopped sweet pickle and pimento for color and spice. Serve with crackers, and see if your guests don't want the recipe.

Today is the day the farmers come to town. On their stalls outside the markets are lined the fresh vegetables from their respective farms, crisp and colorful, less than a day old. Call the Marketer and she will tell you all about them.

Today, is the day that you can get special German rye bread, 10 and 15 cents a loaf. A market baker has it on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. His German raison loaf is 15 cents.

Cauliflower for today's menu is 15 and 20 cents a head, according to size; tomatoes 10 cents a pound; peas that are fat and luscious looking sell at 2 pounds for 25 cents.

One pound of the beef that the Marketer planned for Sunday will disappear tonight creamed on toast. Left-over meats can be used chopped and creamed with a dash of Worcestershire sauce, or in an omelette made into small cakes or meat loaf. A clever housewife can, with a little originality, disguise a left-over meat so that the family will forget they have eaten the same variety for three meals.

Rice Cakes and Crushed Fruit.

Mix cold, cooked rice with slightly beaten egg (allowing 1 egg to 2 cups rice). Heat 1 tablespoon butter or other fat in frying pan; drop the rice mixture into the pan by spoonfuls to make cakes; saute on both sides. Serve with a covering of crushed, fresh or stewed fruit, or with maple syrup.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Colds in North.

One method of studying the very difficult problems related to the common cold is to observe the people in very isolated, thinly populated regions. Drs. Paul and Freese contribute to the investigation of the influenza and colds now being made in Spitzbergen by one of the foundations. The general opinion is that those who live well within the Arctic Circle do not have colds except when the infection is brought in, though there is some testimony to the contrary.

In Longyear City, where this investigation was made, the reporters say colds never prevail except following the arrival of people from the outside. The people of the region are completely isolated for 11 months in the year. There is one month in which the weather conditions permit travelers to come and go. All of the commerce and travel of the community is limited to this one month.

Soon after the first arrivals enter the community the first case of coryza appears. In a few days the disease has become epidemic.

The length of the incubation period is about 48 hours. This means that the man who began to get sick on Thursday noon was exposed to some spreaders of the infection on Tuesday about noon. Meanwhile getting wet, getting the feet wet, being chilled, sitting in a draft on Wednesday or other intervening periods had been of only minor importance.

When a person had recovered from this cold he was immune to infection with the same microbes for a certain length of time. The average length of the immunity was seven weeks. In some it was much longer, and in others shorter. A few persons seemed to be permanently immune. After traffic had closed, colds became scarcer and scarcer. Presently there were none, and this condition prevailed until traffic opened the next year.

The report indicates that coryza is an infection. People catch it from those who have it or who are carriers of infection, though not sick—at least not at the time.

This study indicates that some day we will have a vaccine against colds, and those who use it a few times between September and April will escape coryza.

What's in Fashion?

Sheath-Like Frocks for Evening Parties Popular With Girls of Younger Set, Too

Directed by Amos Parrish.

Watch those sub-debs vigorously pushing their roller skates down the street. Watch them again in the evening, swishing their long skirts to a heady tune. Hardly recognize them for the same girls, would you?

Information as to where lingerie of the type illustrated and its variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

The new evening frocks do make them grown-up. But in a delightful, just-bloomed way that doesn't for a minute make them look too old.

They, too, wear the fashionable sheath silhouette, molded through the bodice and over their slim hips . . . bursting into fullness lower down. Their flower stem necks rise above high necklines, dipping to deep V's in the back.

Covered shoulders, especially the flyaway wing kinds, are their pets. And puffed sleeves, often slit to keep them from being too demure. The new-from-the-bandbox dropped shoulder line (that's it above), has a young sophistication that will make it sought after.

These wings and puffs look so youthfully crisp in the stiff materials that they are making the swishy new fabrics extra popular. Taffetas, ribbed silks and moires . . . many of the younger set have gone in for these. Although plenty haven't been able to resist the glamour of velvets and satins.

Any of these fabrics, in brilliant red, in vibrant NRA blue, pansy blue or fresh yellow green, gives a smart prep-school girl the vivid, start-things look she wants.

Of course she, like her older sister, recognizes the unquenchable distinction of white and black. But the new gay colors are such fun to see yourself in that the whites and blacks are chosen mainly by those who already have at least one color hanging in the wardrobe.

Old-fashion satin is the junior's pet as she goes skimming across a dance floor. Yet thoroughly modern is this sheath gown that gives her long, lean lines only to go quaint at the top, with stiffened arm puffs. And as you can guess, it is BLACK satin.

Stocks React Four-Tenths in Light Trading

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—With a holiday in the offing, stock market volume contracted to the smallest total in several months today. Prices, except for some metal issues, reflected the curtailment of initiative and small losses were generally the rule, making the average net change a decline of less than half a point.

Traders may have been influenced by what they regarded as uncertainties regarding monetary matters, by the fresh flare-up of agricultural discontent, by further evidence of dullness in industry and by heavy grain markets.

Dollars, although very weak against sterling at one time, improved in relation to the gold currencies during market hours. The R. F. C. raised its daily buying figure to a new high at $32.84 and disclosed that it had already made gold purchases abroad. The total was not announced.

Pound Rises to $4.92.

The British pound had an early run up of more than 6 cents, putting the quotation above $4.92, to a new postwar high. It was also strong against the French franc, which led to the assumption that capital was being shifted from France to London because of increasing uneasiness over the Paris government's ability to stick with the gold standard, especially if budgetary difficulties persist.

Wall street's unwillingness to venture from the sidelines to which it has clung rather closely in the last fortnight was evident from the slow pace taken by the market. Transfers aggregated 686,340 shares, the smallest since April 17. Bond volume was also light, with the trend still downward, particularly for U. S. Governments. In stocks, there was little to choose among the chief divisions.

The best showing was made by mining shares, where silvers did the leading coincident with a markup in bar metal to 41½ cents an ounce, the highest since 1930. International Silver and U. S. Smelting each gained more than 3 points, Cerro de Pasco was up 2 and American Smelting around 1. Gold issues were steady and quiet.

Industrials Edge Lower.

Industrials edged lower. U. S Steel, Westinghouse, Chrysler, General Motors, Texas Corporation, American Can, Du Pont, National Biscuit, Case and Harvester eased fractions to somewhat more than a point. Allied Chemical lost 2¼ and American Telephone 1½.

Rails failed to follow Saturday's advance, but confined their reactions to moderate proportions. Alcohols slipped on the eve of an election which may seal the fate of prohibition. However, these shares apparently have discounted repeal and their market followers are now more concerned with the probable effect which taxation will have on operating profits.

The most important business barometer to appear was the weekly estimate of steel production by American Iron & Steel Institute. This placed the current average at 25.2 per cent of capacity, a decrease of nine-tenths of 1 per cent since last Monday. The current rate was close to trade calculations. Last week's freight loadings by the big railway systems were under a year ago, Chesapeake & Ohio reporting a decrease of 1.9 per cent and Santa Fe a decline of 8.4 per cent. The normal time for the annual traffic peak is now passed.

Can Business Run Itself?

Standard of Living Shows We Have Done Fairly Well

By Ralph West Robey.

It always rather shocks me to be told, especially if it is in the tone that there can be no question about it, that American business is incapable of running and controlling itself. It shocks me even more to have such a statement made from the White House and be accepted by the public virtually without a murmur, as has happened in the last few days.

Perhaps this feeling on my part is the result of being somewhat old fashioned in my economic thinking, of still believing, for example, in the so-called law of supply and demand and scores of the other principles that nonchalantly have been thrown to the winds in this country during the last few months. Old fashioned or not, however, and reasoning it out in every day that I can, it still seems to me that on the whole American business men have done fairly well in the history of this country in the way of production, profits, wages and savings.

Of course, they made grievous errors. Further, they certainly have indulged in many practices that were unwise and socially regrettable. Also, they frequently have got into difficulties with the result that widespread readjustments were necessary. Granting all of this, however, there still remains the fact that the United States has attained the highest standard of living for its population as a whole that ever has been reached by any nation in the history of the world.

Such Results Could Not Be Realized by Boobs.

If our businessmen had been such complete flops in the running of their affairs as the White House statement indicates, it does not seem that we could have had this net result. Rather, I should think our standard of living would be low—that we would be fighting to keep body and soul together instead of having our political campaigns waged on the basis of which party can assure having two cars in every garage. Our condition, in other words, even today after four years of depression, does not support the thesis that businessmen are all a bunch of incompetents, crooks, and economic morons.

I recognize, of course, that in the last four years there has been an extraordinary amount of human suffering in this country and that it is imperative to take whatever steps we can to alleviate it. Further, that the business leaders frequently have floundered in a disheartening manner in trying to meet our problems. At the same time I do not believe that merely because we still have an enormous number of unemployed, idle factories, huge surpluses, insolvent banks and financial institutions, one is justified in jumping to the conclusion that all private initiative has been lost, that never again can business run itself, and that, in consequence, the Government must enter every organization and in effect see that the windows are kept clean and the desks properly dusted.

To have such an attitude expressed by the White House, in fact, frightens me. I do not like the implication it carries as to how we are going from here on. It is too much like saying that since an automobile has stopped for lack of gas we now must fill the tank with some new but untried liquid which is guaranteed either to make the car go faster than ever before or to blow it into a million pieces.

Conditions Are Characteristic of Periods of Readjustment.

I do not think there is any justification for just assuming that such an experiment has to be made. The conditions prevailing in the last four years are the characteristics of every period of business readjustment. They constitute the cost we have to pay for having made errors in the past. In no sense can they be taken as conclusive evidence that we never can have another period of prosperity under private management of our business structure.

In fact there is far more reason even today to have faith in the ability of our business men to run their affairs, in spite of their past errors, than there is to believe Government management will be a success. Not only have the business men had some experience but they have a direct motive for being successful. Of course a lot of them may be crooks, rapacious, utterly selfish, and stupid. Men with these characteristics, however, are not completely unknown in Government service, and it would have to approach the running of business as a novice.

Instead of taking the position, therefore, that American business ability and initiative have become completely petrified, it seems to me it would be wise to give this ability and initiative a chance to function. This means establishing conditions in which business men will be willing to assume ordinary risks. At present we do not have such conditions. Further we never shall have such conditions so long as our currency policies remain uncertain, the Government continues to spend incredible sums of money on this or that project, and there is the everlasting threat of closer and closer governmental direction of all enterprise—through imposing conditions which makes profits highly improbable.

London—Business was done on a small scale in a quiet session of the stock exchange today. Cunard and White Star steamship shares improved on expectations of a merger of the two lines, while transatlantic issues declined on unfavorable Wall street reports. German bonds and silt-edged securities were easier. The market closed dull.

Paris—Lacking support from Wall street, prices on the bourse sagged in a dull market owing to uncertainty regarding the government's plans to balance the budget. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—After opening listless, business on the bourse improved a trifle as some interest in mining issues developed. However, the market closed dull and inactive.

Federal Bonds Turn Heavy; Market Sinks

Domestic Groups Sag Also as Sales Drop to $10,241,000.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Uniform heaviness in U. S. Government securities tended to keep bond dealers on the sidelines and left the market with little or no effective support today.

Most domestic groups had a sagging trend, although prime corporation issues were apparently less affected by the declines in Federals than they had been in some recent sessions.

Transfers were comparatively small at $10,241,000 against $14,664,000 on Friday. The average price of 60 corporation loans was off .2 of a point.

In registering further declines ranging from 8-32 to 23-32 point U. S. Treasury loans continued virtually unbroken the past fortnight downward drift. Libertys were less affected although the 3½s yielded 10-32 of a point.

A few advances appeared in the semi-speculative groups, but the major trend was down. Especially was this true of the loans which usually respond to stock market trends.

There were losses of as much as 2 points in some obligations of the Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Burlington, Kansas City Southern, New York Central and Northern Pacific. Exceptions to the downward drift in utility and industrial categories occurred in moderate gains in Armour 4½s, American Rolling Mill 5s, Interborough Rapid Loans, and Western Union 5s.

Irregularity prevailed in the foreign sector, with most price changes narrow. French government issues sold off rather sharply, but recovered some ground at the finish. British Loans were higher in sympathy with the strength of sterling.

Bank Stocks Rise In New York City

New York, Nov. 6.—The New York City bank stock market registered a rather sharp recovery during the last week. The aggregate value of the 16 leading issues, as compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, ended the week at $1,219,067,000, compared with $1,177,560,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $41,506,000, or 3.5 per cent. The low point for the year to date, namely, $1,065,746,000, was recorded on April 5.

The current average yield of the 16 stocks of 6.43 per cent compares with a yield of 6.66 per cent reported on October 27. The current market value of the 16 stocks is now 0.90 times their known book value, against 0.87 on October 27. Based upon current figures the 16 stocks are now quoted at an average of 10.5 times their known earnings, against 10.2 times at the close of the previous week.

London Fears Debt Delay as Dollar Drops

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The slump of the American dollar to a new low level of $4.92¾ in relation to the British pound today aroused fears that the breakdown of Anglo-American war debts discussions may have started an Anglo-American currency warfare.

Pressure said to have been caused by nervousness over the future of the dollar pushed the rate from an opening at $4.86½ to an after-hours close at $4.88¾. The official close was $4.90¾, with $4.92¾ the extreme level during the day's trading.

The financial section anxiously awaited a statement on the war debts Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, will give the House of Commons tomorrow, in the hope it will end the uncertainty.

Some observers said that Great Britain will not risk having the £350,000,000 in the British equalization fund wiped out in a currency depreciation contest and that the dollar, having today passed the old psychological barrier of par, may continue down the incline.

Also helping to explain the dollar's drop today was the usual Monday exchange uncertainty. The final official rate was a low record since Great Britain and the United States went off the gold standard.

All gold currencies were weaker on sterling. The French franc, which also was being converted into sterling in some volume because of French budget difficulties, was quoted at 81.25 in relation to the pound before finishing the day at 81.06, compared to Saturday's close at 80.18.

The depreciation of the franc in relation to sterling was credited in some quarters to the probable operation of the British exchange equalization fund.

Larger Cotton Crop Predicted For 1933 Yield

(Associated Press.)

Cotton crop forecasts at the Department of Agriculture yesterday were for a slightly larger world supply in 1933-34 than in either of the two previous years.

This in spite of a 1933 American cotton crop considerably below world consumption and a reduced world carry-over at the season's end, it was said.

The prediction was made on the basis of present indications available to the department's crop experts.

In its cotton outlook for 1933-34 the department said that without the cotton adjustment program the domestic crop probably would have been the second largest in history and far in excess of world consumption of American cotton this year.

The prospective large 1933-34 supply was attributed to an increase of foreign cotton, both by larger production and by larger carryover. It was explained, however, that the increased production in many foreign countries this year represented in most cases a return to more normal production after one or two years of reduced crops.

A total of 40,800,000 acres planted to cotton in the United States in 1933 represented an increase of 11.6 per cent over the acreage of the previous year, but the removal of about 10,400,000 acres by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration left an indicated area for harvest 16 per cent less than that of 1932, and the smallest since 1921. The department said that without the 1934 adjustment program, the improved return from cotton, continued abundant supplies of labor and other factors probably would lead to further increases in acreage planted.

The adjustment program calls for an area in 1934 of only 25,000,000 acres, which, with yields equal to the average for the last 10 years, would give a crop of around 8,800,000 bales, compared with the October estimate of 12,900,000 bales for the 1933 crop.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Nov. 6 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. Agr.). Quotations on domestic wool in Boston are being fully maintained at levels prevailing for several weeks. The confident attitude of wool men for domestic wool prices is aided materially by a better feeling regarding the wool goods situation and by the strength recently displayed in foreign wool markets.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston grain and flour exchange, during the week ended November 4, amounted to 10,247,200 pounds, as compared with 682,500 during the previous week.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Liquidation

December Closes at 9.25 as General Market Drops 18 to 20 Points.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Trading in cotton was quiet today with prices sagging under continued liquidation in preparation for the holiday tomorrow and the Government crop report on Wednesday.

Offerings were not heavy, but demand was limited to covering or trade buying on a scale down. December contracts closed at 9.25, with the general market closing barley steady at net declines of 18 to 22 points.

The opening was 6 to 9 points lower on some Southern selling.

Four more of the private end-October crop reports were issued with figures on the indicated yield ranging from 11,975,000 up to 13,620,000 bales.

13,254,000-Bale Crop.

According to a canvass made during the day, New York Cotton Exchange members on the average are looking for a crop of about 13,254,000 bales, compared with last month's Government indication of 12,885,000 bales.

Exports today 48,064 making 2,621,370 so far this season. Port receints 50,515. Port stocks 3,904,838.

The average of six private end-October reports published during the past several days, points to a crop or about 13,026,000 bales compared with an average indication of 12,360,000 reported by the same authorities last month. Liverpool cables reported a small market there with lack of confidence owing to currency uncertainties and with some local, continental and Bombay selling on fears of further depreciation in the dollar.

Houses with Liverpool connections were reported on both sides of the market here during the early trading, but there appeared to be some Continental buying on the differences. Reports from the Southwest said that owing to the cold rains very little cotton was being offered from the interior and the basis was higher. There were other reports that the holding movement was becoming more pronounced.

Dividend Index Holds to Level For October

New York, Nov. 6—Although most of the October dividend changes represented increases, the net effect on the weighted average per share dividend rate was negligible, according to the monthly compilation prepared by Moody's Investors Service. On October 31, this average was $1.06, the same as a month ago.

The index of 600 stocks has remained practically stationary since May 31. However, during this period the dividend rate on 492 industrials included has advanced from 72 to 76 cents per share and on 36 railroads from 86 to 91 cents. These advances have been offset by important utility dividend reductions, the average rate for 30 utilities declining from $2.19 to $2.07. The average rate per share for 42 financial companies (banks and insurance) has fallen from $3.38 to $3.17 during the same period.

Stock yields, due to the continued decline in stock prices, showed a further increase during October. The weighted average yield on 200 common stocks was 4.1 per cent on October 31 compared with 3.7 per cent at the end of September. Average yields, although at low levels, were higher on October 31 than at any other month-end since April 30, 1933.

Steel Plants Look to Rail Buying for Aid

Demand for Metal Is Still Shrinking; New Prices May Turn Tide.

Cleveland, Nov. 6.—With the general demand for steel still shrinking, hope for a reversal of the downward trend in steelworks operations rests upon the promptness with which the program of railroad buying and the requirements for public works projects can be converted into rolling mill schedules, says the magazine Steel.

Agreement on a price of $36.375 for standard rails and the allotment by PWA of $135,000,000 to the railroads for the purchase of rails, trackwork, rolling stock, power and equipment would seem to clear the way for the placing of orders at an early date. However, the expenditures may be spread over a period of many months. For instance, the $51,000,000 nominally set aside for the purchase of 1,000,000 tons of rails and 400,000 tons of fastenings is likely to extend over the entire year of 1934.

At the moment, the allocation of $84,000,000 to the Pennsylvania's electrification program seems to hold more promise of early, diversified business than the track material deal. The announcement from Washington, stating that the PWA allotment provides for roadbed improvement, and the building of 132 electric locomotives and 7,000 cars, is interpreted to mean that early releases can be approved of certain orders placed more than a year ago.

Old Contract Release.

About 40,000 tons of shapes on old contracts are expected to be released as a result of the plan to resume the Pennsylvania's electrification project. Other Washington reports of contemplated purchases of 100,000 cars are discounted in the steel industry, where the opinion is expressed that 50,000 cars may be the maximum resulting from the Government's present efforts.

On quotations for the 12 locomotives for the Northern Pacific, some builders are reserving the right to revise quotations should the equipment be purchased through Government aid.

Construction projects sponsored by PWA continue to furnish the principal impetus to the plate, shape, concrete bar and cast iron pipe markets. Current awards are comprised of an unusually large number of small contracts. Structural shape awards for the week total 15,595 tons, as compared with 22,075 tons in the previous week. Several projects requiring large tonnage have been held up pending the settlement of disagreements.

Bids for 14,000 Tons.

Bids for 14,000 tons of shapes for New York Central grade separation work at Syracuse, N. Y., will close December 5. Tenders for 8,000 tons for the West Side elevated highway, New York City, were due November 3. The Eastern plate market has in prospect a fair tonnage for Navy work. Bids will be due in November for 12,200 tons of plates for cruisers. Cincinnati is asking for bids November 8 on 32,450 feet of cast iron pipe and 82 tons of fittings.

Output of coke pig iron dropped sharply in October to 1,354,696 tons, a decline of 10.2 per cent from the 1,507,931 tons produced in September. The number of active stacks on October 31 was 80, as against 89 on September 30.

In the two months of recession from the August peak, daily average production has suffered a decline of 26.2 per cent and the number of furnaces in blast has dropped from 98 to 80.

Pig Iron Quiet.

The pig iron market remains quiet, with shipments declining slightly. Current speculation points to a price advance for first quarter business, but the difficulty of introducing higher prices unless consumption improves considerably is appreciated. The scrap market is listless, with prices sagging slightly.

Steelworks operations for the week ended November 4 averaged 25 per cent, a drop of 5 points from the previous week. The rate in the Pittsburgh district was 25 per cent, a drop from 29; in Chicago, 31 per cent, a decline from 36; in eastern Pennsylvania, 19 per cent, as compared with 20½, and in Youngstown, 32 per cent, from 38. Cleveland, New England and Detroit operations remained unchanged; in Wheeling the rate rose from 36 to 38 per cent; in Buffalo and Birmingham losses were registered.

Steel's iron and steel composite stands unchanged at $31.59; its finished steel composite remains at $49.20; and its scrap index continues its decline, dropping 13 cents to $10.04.

England May Remove Duty on Paint Materials

The import duties advisory committee of the United Kingdom is considering applications to remove the duty of 10 per cent ad valorem on barytes, dry earth colors, rosin (colophony), and raw tung oil (China wood oil) imported from sources outside the British Empire, and to reduce the duty on magnet coils wound with aluminum wire for electric hoists and separators, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Lynn W. Meekins, London.

Leads Nation in Sweet Potatoes.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Accomac County, Va., continues to lead the Nation in sweet potato production, the total being more than twice as much as that of any other county, according to new United States Census figures.

Sales of Kresge Co. Improve.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Sales of S. S. Kresge Co. in October were $10,848,332, against $10,505,762 a year ago. Sales in the first ten months of this year were 1 per cent lower than in 1932.

Transactions on N. Y. Curb Market

Total stock sales today, 143,000 shares; year ago, 198,920 shares. Total bond sales today, $2,000,000; year ago, $3,108,000.

Michaels Gives View on Verde Water Project

Purpose of Reclamation Plan Is Explained in Letter to Post.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6, 1933.
To the Editor,
The Washington Post.

Dear Sir: The undersigned is a director of the Verde District in Arizona. As such I read with close attention the editorial in The Post this morning entitled, "A Questionable Project."

Obviously a number of statements in this editorial are based upon misinformation given to your editorial writer. This being the case, and being certain that a newspaper of the type of The Post would be unwilling to mislead its readers, I present herewith the facts.

The whole controversy is the result of diligent efforts made by representatives of the present administration of the Salt River Valley water users. That these present officials do not represent public sentiment in Arizona is plain when it is noted that the Verde project has the indorsement of every important civic body there, and that the granting of this loan for construction of the Verde brought about the greatest spontaneous celebration in the history of Phoenix and the Salt River Valley.

Mystery Denied.

There is nothing "mysterious" about it. Arguments pro and con have been going on for more than 30 years. Numerous efforts have been made by the water users to secure rights in the Verde, over and above their established rights, and in every case the rights of the land owners in the Verde project to the water now to be impounded and utilized have been upheld.

Since 1917 there has been a series of investigations and hearings by the Reclamation Service in the matter, and in no case did this department give to the water users any additional rights, and at no time have we, or the Reclamation Service, or anybody else, proposed to interfere with the rights to normal flow and a portion of the Verde flood waters, long enjoyed by the water users.

What we have proposed, and what will be done under this loan, is simply to impound, save, and use waters that have heretofore always run to waste, and that unless saved and used will undoubtedly be utilized in Mexico, on lands competitive with lands in the United States.

Report of Engineers.

In the third paragraph of the editorial it is stated that "a number of engineers who have made a careful study of the entire project claim that all the storage water that the Verde can provide is needed for land now under cultivation in the Salt River Valley. This position is supported in an exhaustive report made a few years ago by Homer Hamlin, engineer for the Reclamation Bureau."

Careful investigation on your part will develop the fact that no engineers' reports adverse to the Verde District have ever been made except by engineers restrained and paid by the Water Users. The engineer specifically mentioned, Homer Hamlin, at the time he made the report quoted, was not representing the Reclamation Service, but was a consulting engineer retained by the Water Users.

The water that will now be impounded and utilized on Verde District lands has been officially appropriated and set aside for those lands since 1916.

Since the application was made this spring, for the construction loan that has just been approved, four separate investigations and hearings have been had in the matter, because of the determined fight made by the present administration of the Water Users against our project.

Acreage Involved.

In the sixth paragraph of your editorial you say "about 94,000 acres of land are included in the Verde irrigation district." As a matter of fact more than that lies within the district, but the net acreage that will be irrigated will be from 80,000 to 85,000 acres.

As to the power market, in normal times there has never been enough power available in Arizona, in and near the Salt River Valley. A number of years will be consumed in the construction of the project and making available its power, and I know of no one willing to say that normal times will not have returned to this country four or five years hence.

Yours truly,
E. W. MICHAELS, Director.
Phoenix, Ariz.

Pieces of Eight — Blackbeard Chooses a Guard. — By Charles B. Driscoll

Israel Hands, for whom Stevenson named one of his famous characters, was boatswain under Capt. Teach, aboard the pirate ship Queen Anne's Revenge. Teach called tough old Bo'sun Hands to him on the first day out on the pirate's honeymoon cruise.

"You saw the wench I brought aboard?" asked Teach. "Ay, sir." Guard her. Take her short rations. If any man else come near her, kill him. She is my prisoner, and my wife. If aught befall her, I'll have your blood."

Israel Hands became warder and faithful servitor of the fair Prudence. "My lady," he said, "I take orders from the cap'n, an' it may be I can help your ladyship. Here's grub, a tot o' rum, an' the cap'n's compliments."

The Queen Anne's Revenge was three days out when Hands sent John Carnes, a younger pirate, spinning across the deck, for disrespectful allusion to the prisoner. "An' it's overside for the next of ye that lays yer tongue to sich gab."

All TWIN IGNITION
VALVE-IN-HEAD MOTORS!

88 · 100 · 125 HORSEPOWER

COINCIDENTAL STARTER
ADVANCED STYLE · LUXURY

IN Nash showrooms from coast to coast a new motoring year begins today. The 1934 Nash is on display—all models with Twin-Ignition valve-in-head motors!

1934 cars styled to be the most "easily recognized" cars on the street. Styled with a "Speedstream" distinctiveness new to America and new to the world. Action in every line and curve. They're beautiful; they're unforgettably smart!

1934 cars powered to make motoring a sport again. Powered to soar easily and swiftly up hard-pull grades that most cars "lug" up. Powered to "make time" on the highway, and to have power left when you've had all you want!

Nash has the answer for 1934. Nash has the style. Nash has the power. Nash has the luxury. Add to your knowledge of motor car progress by seeing the 1934 Nash today.

88...100...125 HORSEPOWER
And it's Twin Ignition valve-in-head horsepower—in every model! Two spark plugs ignite the gasoline in each cylinder. The gasoline mixture burns faster and evenly. More energy! Greater smoothness! Actually 22% more power, 5 miles an hour more top speed, and 2 more miles from a gallon of gasoline than the same motor gives with single ignition!

COINCIDENTAL STARTER
Not only saves time and effort, but conserves battery life. De-clutching to engage gear to put car in motion also starts the motor! Nash has greatly increased ease of operation. A touch of a finger shifts gears at any speed. All gears in the new Nash synchro-shift transmission are smooth-meshing helical gears—quiet in all speeds. Brakes are wider and fully equalized. Two upward-action, positive, gear-driven windshield wipers provide maximum vision at eye level.

BUILT-IN QUIET VENTILATION
The new Nash bodies have an improved type of built-in ventilation that is not only draftless, but also quiet, and provides unobstructed vision. Rear quarter windows pivot to direct air flow in any volume desired. In cold and stormy weather, a patented "Air Vent" in the front windows provides complete ventilation with absolute comfort.

ADVANCED STYLE...LUXURY
1934 body lines flow with "Speedstream" grace from front to rear. A new note in bonnet design is an embossed Marquee hood, overlapping the radiator and snugly joining the front-end grille. Streamlined parking lamps and tail lights are built into the heavy roll-edge skirted fenders. Rare luxury inside. Seats are wider and deeper. Extra large package compartment in the dash. And the instrument panel groups all instruments in two great clock-face dials—a perfect beauty!

H.M.S. Danae Arrives Here Amid Pomp

Round of Formal Visits Started by Vice Admiral Drax.

Firing a 21-gun salute and running the Stars and Stripes to the mainmast head, his majesty's ship Danae steamed into the Navy Yard yesterday afternoon.

While the ship's band played and marines and bluejackets lined the deck at attention, the light cruiser of the British, American and West Indian Station was eased into her berth as Navy Yard guns boomed an answer to the salute.

The Danae (the men aboard call her the "Danny") is here for a seven-day stay, having cruised from Jamaica with H. M. S. Norfolk, a 10,000-ton cruiser, which put in at Baltimore for a visit.

It was "jack ashore" for many of the sailors, marines and officers of the Danae. Aboard went a supply of American dollars to exchange for English currency for "shore liberty."

Commander Visits Envoy.

Vice Admiral R. A. R. Plunckett-Ernle-Erle-Drax, station commander, was on board the Norfolk. After receiving and returning calls from ranking Navy and Army officers, he motored to Washington to be the guest of the British Ambassador at dinner.

Yesterday afternoon courtesy calls to the Danae were made by American naval officials. Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, commandant of the navy yard, entertained officers of the Danae at an informal function.

Today Admiral Drax will call on ministers for the Irish Free State, the Union of South Africa and Canada. The British Ambassador will accompany him to call on Secretary of State Hull at noon.

Later he will call on Secretary Dern, Secretary Swanson, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations.

To Receive Ministers.

Tomorrow afternoon the distinguished British seaman, a veteran of the World War battles of Jutland, Heligoland and Dogger Bank, will be on board the Danae to receive calls from Ministers of British dominions and American dignitaries. He will entertain at 8:30 o'clock at a dinner on the ship.

Secretary Swanson will entertain Admiral Drax tomorrow at a luncheon at the Mayflower with Capt. H. E. C. Blagrove, commanding the Norfolk, and Capt. C. H. Knox-Little, commanding the Danae.

Commander W. R. Monroe has been assigned by the Navy Department to accompany the visitors. Thursday, the officers of the two ships will visit the Naval Academy, as guests of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent.

Sailors from the Danae were guests last night at a dance at the Navy Yard. Warrant officers were guests of Navy Yard warrant officers. The Danae's Marines will be entertained by Marines here and at Quantico.

British Cruiser Docks at Navy Yard

Claim on Child's Death Reviewed

Noah Best Wins Hearing Before Supreme Court.

Noah Best was granted a review by the Supreme Court yesterday of the action of the District of Columbia courts refusing to entertain a suit he brought against the District of Columbia claiming damages for the death of his son, Edward Best, 5, who fell through a hole in a wharf maintained by the District and drowned.

The District Supreme Court dismissed the suit, refusing to submit it to a jury, and its action was approved by the District Court of Appeals. The action of the lower courts was based on the failure of the complaint to state a cause of action, the courts taking the view that it did not show liability on the part of the District for the drowning of the child.

Best contended the wharf was adjacent to a street, without a fence or watchman to exclude or protest children who might go on it. He pointed out the wharf flooring contained many holes, dangerous to young children who might play on it.

Ahearn Loses In Final Appeal To Evade Jail

High Court Rules Alleged Bootlegger Guilty in Contempt Case.

His time-worn battle against the forces of prohibition ended yesterday when the United States Supreme Court refused to review his case. Thus it becomes mandatory for Ahearn to serve 10 months in prison and pay a $1,000 fine for having held the District Supreme Court in contempt.

Reputedly a dealer in illicit beverages, Ahearn was restrained from handling contraband liquors by an order of Justice Jennings Bailey in December 1931. The order followed an earlier raid and subsequent charge of maintaining a nuisance at 815 Vermont avenue northwest.

The Government decided to show he failed to heed the court's order. As evidence, a series of raids were conducted on establishments under his operation. One was at 725 Seventeenth street northwest, and another at 1636 Connecticut avenue northwest. This was more than a year later. It was then that contempt charges were filed.

Ahearn appealed to the highest court, after contending that the court order applied only to traveling bootleggers and not speakeasies.

Last week a police squad descended on third-floor quarters of Club Champlain, 817 Thirteenth street northwest. Although Ahearn was not to be found, it was rumored he held interest in the club. Charges from this raid have not been heard.

President Soon To End Pay Cut, Says Harrison

Higher Cost of Living Will Cause Restoration, Senator Feels.

Pointing out that the Government pay cut was enacted with a stipulation that salaries should be raised when a definite increase in cost of living should be established, Senator Harrison, Mississippi, yesterday predicted action would be taken by President Roosevelt at an early date to restore all or part of the 15 per cent reduction.

A study is now being made on the cost of living, he said, adding that it is generally understood living costs have gained.

Senator Harrison announced his support of the campaign to restore salaries some time ago. Senator Wagner, New York, yesterday also advised E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, that he favored the movement. Babcock announced that a total of 111 members of Congress have pledged themselves for restoration of the pay cut.

The forty-year ruling recently announced by the Civil Service Commission as the maximum age for applying for certain positions, also was a subject of a conference yesterday in the office of Secretary of Labor Perkins. Harry B. Mitchell, president of the commission, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, member of the commission, together with L. A. Moyer, chief examiner, and H. E. Morgan, of the recruiting division, were closeted with Miss Perkins for some time.

Teacher Tells About 'Hush' Money Paid

Says 'Fake' Policeman Trick Caused Loss of $5,000.

George Gormley Named With Countess in Trial.

The story of how she was "frightened" into paying $5,000 in cash and signing two notes for $5,000 each to avoid possible publicity on arrest was told on the witness stand in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Miss Louise Maret, co-proprietor of the fashionable Maret School.

Testifying as complaining witness in the trial of George Gormley and Countess Grace De Benque, charged with larceny of $5,000, Miss Maret described how she met Gormley and accepted an invitation for an automobile ride in October, 1931.

Miss Maret said Gormley invited her to take a ride to the Chevy Chase Circle. They drove past the circle, she said, and when she noticed darkness coming on she asked Gormley why he had driven so far. Gormley said the evening was so warm he felt impelled to go for a longer ride, she said.

Man With Flashlight.

Shortly after this, the 60-year-old witness said, Gormley stopped the car and a man with a flashlight stepped up and asked as to the car's ownership.

Gormley got out, talked to this man, now identified as Charles A. May, of Takoma Park, and notified Miss Maret "the man" had told him to drive her home and then return to meet him.

Gormley then drove her to the home of Countess DeBenque, on Wyoming avenue and left her there while he went to "fix it up with the officer." On his return, she said, Gormley informed her the policeman had demanded $25,000, but that "he had talked him into accepting $15,000."

In company with the countess the next day, Miss Maret declared, she went to the Washington Loan & Trust Co. and withdrew $1,000 and made arrangements to sell $4,000 of securities.

Gave $3,500 Check.

A $3,500 check, made out by the B. F. Saul Co. and indorsed by Countess DeBenque was introduced. Miss Maret said she was given the check for the securities.

With this money, she said, she went to the countess' home, where Gormley received from the countess some money. He left, the witness said, and returning in a short time, told her he had paid the policeman.

Two notes for $5,000 each were signed by Miss Maret and turned over to the countess, and Gormley made out his own note for $15,000 and gave it to Miss Maret, she testified.

Miss Maret said she became suspicious and consulted an attorney.

May, first witness, testified he had been paid $250 by Gormley to step up to the car and ask, "Is the machine broken down?" He will be recalled by defense attorneys.

Lead in Food Detected in 30 Minutes by New Method

Quick and Accurate Plan Aids Government in Prosecutions.

With determination of the presence of lead in foods and cosmetics, the biggest problem before the Food and Drug Administration, investigators previously handicapped by lack of quick methods of detection, yesterday were informed of a new method which shows the presence of lead in 30 minutes.

A quick and accurate method of detecting lead in cosmetics, foods, hair dyes and face powders under suspicion is an absolute necessity if the Government is to show in court that a product is worthless or harmful to the public, said George P. Larrick, chief food and drug inspector of the Food and Drug Administration, yesterday.

Reagent Described.

The chemical reagent, "dithizone," which will show the presence of lead in any substance in 30 minutes, yesterday was described to the Association of Agricultural Chemists meeting at the Raleigh Hotel, by H. J. Wichmann, general referee on heavy metals for the association.

Wichmann and his associates, working for more than a year, are the first "scientific detectives" to reveal the fact that this reagent can detect the presence of lead in such rapid time. Previous methods took three days.

The new method will be used in testing shipments of apples which can not wait while other methods are applied. It consists in isolating the lead in a solution and adding the reagent, which will show by the formation of red, blue or purple precipitates the amount of lead present.

This same method can be applied to cosmetics which are known to contain lead and candies containing prizes made of lead can be examined.

"You can't say just where lead will be found," said Larrick, "but behind the whole thing is the necessity of a quick, sure method of detecting lead in foods and other products which are offered to the public."

He emphasized that laws are of no value if there are no methods available to prove violation of law. The discovery of the "color method" will be of invaluable aid in convincing juries in a court of law that there are products which must be outlawed, he said.

Sick Man Cuts Throat In Second Suicide Try

Philip Atwater, 49, of 2301 Cathedral avenue, failed yesterday in his second suicide attempt in 10 days. He is in Emergency Hospital, recovering from a razor slash on his throat.

Atwater, said to be in ill health, was found in his apartment an hour before he was scheduled to leave for a western sanitarium. Recently he took gas in his apartment.

Court Refuses to Free Teacher From Kitchen With Divorce

The "Come Out of the Kitchen" theme was shunted into reverse in District Court of Appeals yesterday when Mrs. Alfrida K. Taylor, a school teacher, was denied a divorce from her husband, Dr. James Eli H. Taylor.

Mrs. Taylor, who previously had failed in the same objective in District Supreme Court, sought a limited divorce on the grounds that her husband never complimented her on her domestic duties and complained frequently.

The Taylors, the court learned, were married in 1921, and Mrs. Taylor continued to teach school until 1922. Shortly after their marriage Dr. Taylor was said to have moved into a separate room and discontinued his wife's allowance and she resumed teaching.

The court, observing there was no evidence that the doctor ever complimented his wife about anything after their marriage, adding "Inasmuch as Mrs. Taylor, with her husband's consent, continued teaching until October, 1922, it is not strange that she was unable to fulfill the rather ambitious requirements of the doctor for a housekeeper."

Irish Trying Too Hard, Is Opinion

Teams Well Trained, He Declares, Praising Hunk Anderson.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—The trouble with Notre Dame's faltering football team, as Edgar (Rip) Miller, Navy coach, sees it, is altogether psychological.

"Instead of playing cool, collected football," said Miller today, "they are trying too hard, both for themselves and for Hunk Anderson."

He pointed to the fumbles and mistakes in the pinches Saturday when Navy, although rushed off its feet in midfield and almost at will, scored a brilliant 7-to-0 victory over the South Bend eleven.

Tension Asserted Self.

"The Notre Dame backs hit fast and hard, and it took from four to five Navy players to pull them down time and time again. They have a beautiful blocking line and coordinate for first down after first down until they begin to smell a touchdown. Then the tension asserts itself and the mechanical mistakes begin."

These mistakes, Miller said, can not be blamed on the Notre Dame coach, Hunk Anderson, who has been somewhat under fire because his team has dropped consecutive games to Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh and Navy.

"He's a good coach," said Miller, referring to Anderson, "and Notre Dame showed it had been well trained and well schooled. To me the entire problem is psychological, the effect of public pressure on the players themselves.

"If Notre Dame had scored first Saturday and the players had thus realized that they were clicking and could deliver a scoring punch, it is a question as to what the final Rambler score would have been."

Navy Coach Praises Team.

Miller, who was one of the "mules" in the line at Notre Dame during the days of the "Four Horsemen," had nothing but praise for his own team.

"The victory belongs to the Midshipmen players themselves," he said. "They followed instructions as to how to play the game and won. It was the determined, dogged fight they put up, just as Navy teams always put up a bitter fight."

Of the team captain, Hugh Murray, of Newman, Ga., Miller said:

"Murray displayed everything that a football captain should have. Besides playing a beautiful game himself, he inspired his teammates to play away over their heads."

Two Minor League Stars Traded to A's

Outfielder Radcliffe and Infielder Detore Obtained.

Philadelphia, Nov. 6 (AP).—Rumor and report having traded most of his star performers to other clubs without his knowledge, Connie Mack today began to build up the Philadelphia Athletics for the 1934 campaign.

He announced that Raymond Radcliffe, outfielder and left-hand batter of the St. Paul Club of the American Association, will be with his team next year. In return Mack is sending Pitchers Gowell Claset and Tony Freitas and some cash to St. Paul.

Mack also announced that he has decided to give the Toledo Club of the American Association, Joe Zapustis, formerly of Fordham University, for George Detore, infielder.

Mack said there would be no further announcement of deals for the present. Last week he denied that "Lefty" Grove, "Mickey" Cochrane, Max Bishop and other players had been sent to other clubs.

Buddy Myer Undergoes Appendicitis Operation

Hattiesburg, Miss., Nov. 6 (AP).—Buddy Myer, Washington second baseman, successfully underwent an operation for appendicitis here this morning. The attending surgeon explained that the "trouble was of old standing."

Mrs. Myer said her husband had been worried during the recent world series by abdominal pains, later diagnosed here as appendicitis.

Myer, whose home is in nearby Ellisville, Miss., stood the operation well and expected to be on his feet again in a short time, attendants reported.

Van Keuren, Riding Ace Of 20 Years Ago, Dead

New London, Conn., Nov. 6 (AP).—Eugene Van Keuren, veteran jockey of a generation ago, who rode Rey El Santa Anita to victory in the Chicago American Derby in 1894, is dead at his New York home, relatives announced today.

Van Keuren retired from active riding 20 years ago and since then has worked as a betting commissioner.

Ex-G. W. Aces Signed by Passers

Baker, Pearce, McCarver in Dodger Game Tomorrow Night.

THE acquisition of "Nig" McCarver, Hardy Pearce and Johnny Baker, George Washington University football stars, who were read off the team early Saturday morning because of eligibility rules, will make it possible for the Washington Passers to put an all-G. W. eleven on the field for their game tomorrow night with the Brooklyn Bulldogs at Griffith Stadium. The Bulldogs are in the National Professional League and judging from the Passers past performances against such opposition they will need all the strength they can muster.

Having signed the above trio, the Washington team will present the following line-up; Mulvey and Galloway, ends; Pearce and Slaird, tackles; Nelson and Lee, guards; Blackistone, center; Baker, quarter back; Fenlon and McCarver, half backs, and Bill (Bronsky) Myers, full back. Lee and Myers are assistant varsity coaches at G. W.

Myers Great Booter.

Playing with St. Mary's Celtic in a South Atlantic League engagement last week, Myers showed the local fans an educated toe that sent three dropkicks sailing over the cross-bar from distances of 35, 40, and 45 yards. With McCarver and Baker in the line-up, the Passers will boast the strongest running attack they have had all season.

A movement is afoot to arrange a game between the all-G. W. eleven and a team composed of former Catholic U. stars to be played Thanksgiving Day in the event that C. U. fails to schedule a game that day. Should the Cards play, the plans are to stage the all-star game the following week, possibly on Sunday, with the community chest sharing in the proceeds.

St. Mary's Gaels In Visit to Capital

The Galloping Gaels from St. Mary's rolled into town yesterday morning under the protecting wing of Coach "Slip" Madigan, took a squint-eyed peep at the historical points of interest and after failing to see the President, who was occupied with affairs of state, slipped away for the far west as quietly as they had come.

There were more than 100 persons in the party, which converged on the National Capital by special train. The frail young fellows of 200 pounds or more, comprising the football team, accepted their victory over Fordham Saturday rather nonchalantly, evidencing more interest in Mount Vernon and other spots than in what made the Rams rambuctious.

The team will stop off at South Bend on the return trip, staging a brief workout at Notre Dame, Madigan's Alma Mater. From there, it will proceed directly to Spokane, Wash., where on Saturday it encounters Alonzo Stagg's College of the Pacific eleven.

W.-J. Sending Crack Team To Capital

G. W.'s Friday Rival Has Tied Carnegie Tech, Held Pitt, 9-0.

G. W. Eleven Is Grim, Determined to Win Last 3 Games.

WASHING AND JEFFERSON will find a weakened but none the less determined George Washington football team when the Presidents come to Washington for their Friday night engagement with the local team. While the Colonials are downhearted by their loss to Tennessee, there is nothing but grim determination in their demeanor to round out the season in successful fashion by winning the last three games.

After skidding down from the heights of football greatness, where it lingered so long, Washington and Jefferson again is coming to the fore as a power in Eastern grid circles. Its record for the year shows two victories, three defeats and a scoreless tie with Carnegie Tech.

Lost to Pitt, 9 to 0.

Pittsburgh scored a 9-to-0 win over W. and J. in its first test of the season. It was a bitterly contested game that saw the Panthers win by virtue of superior reserve power that gradually exhausted the opposition. Following its 19-to-7 triumph over Waynesburg, W. and J. dropped a 14-to-0 game to Detroit, and then came back the following week to stop Xavier, 8 to 0. The scoreless tie with Carnegie followed and in its wake came a 21-to-6 trouncing by Duquesne.

Duquesne, Pitt and Detroit rank with the strongest elevens of the East and Midwest, so the Presidents can not be held at fault for losing to them in the first year of their gridiron resurrection. A factor to remember is that W. and J.'s student body is limited to less than 1,000 and good talent is scarce.

The Fife brothers, Ray and Johnny, give the team a brother act of first water. Ray is an end and Johnny a tackle, and their work has been one of the high spots of the team's play this season.

Bubenheim Outstanding.

Carl Bubenheim, a guard, is perhaps the team's outstanding lineman. Six feet tall, weighing 190 pounds, Bubenheim is fast afoot, a hard charger, deadly tackler and no slouch at running interference. Coach Hank Day rates him on par with any guard he has ever seen.

Day is in his second year at the Washington, Pa., school. Using the principles of the Warner system, he came to be recognized as the outstanding high school coach in Western Pennsylvania, winning the scholastic championship 9 out of 13 years.

McPhail to Run Reds; Weil Quits Presidency

Cincinnati, Nov. 6 (AP).—After four years of unsuccessful trying to give Cincinnati a winning team, Sidney Weil today stepped down as president of the Cincinnati Reds.

In a reorganization of the club, Larry McPhail, former president of Columbus of the American Association, acquired an interest, was elected a director and it is generally understood he will be named head of the club. Control of the club was taken over by the Central Trust Co., which acquired Weil's stock, slightly more than 50 per cent.

The bank, it is understood, will give McPhail a free rein in operation of the club. The franchise will remain in Cincinnati.

Jim Thorpe Sues Film Company for $100,000

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Jim Thorpe, Indian athlete, today filed suit for $100,000 against the Columbia Pictures Corporation, claiming the corporation used his name and picture in advertising "the White Eagle," a show in which he did not appear.

Nathan Burman, attorney for the corporation, said in his answer that Thorpe had consented to appear in the picture and later refused, but at the time advance advertising already had been distributed.

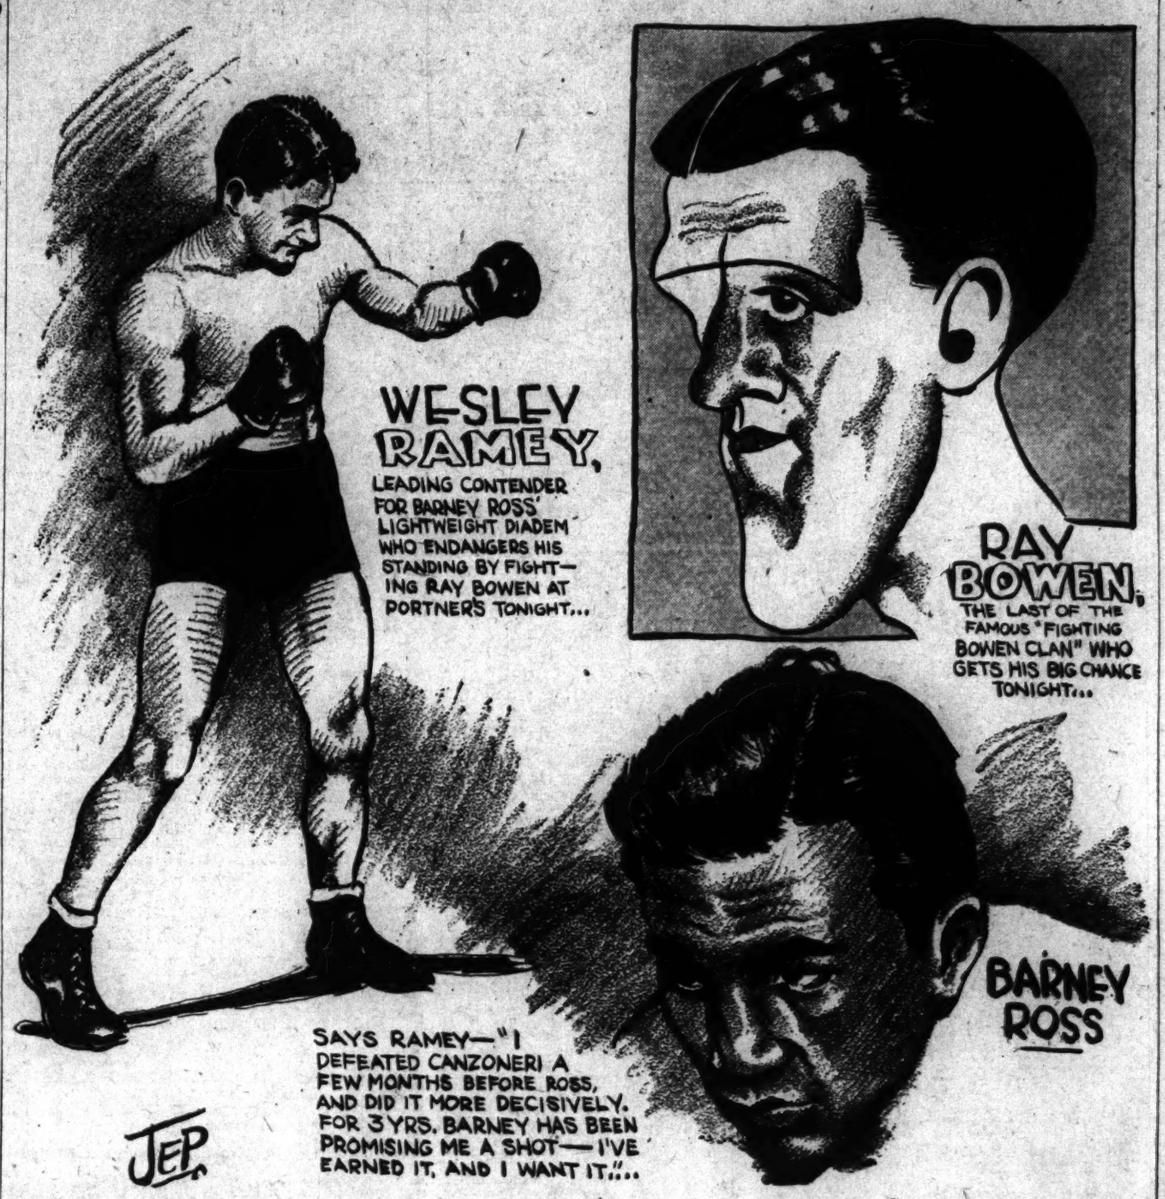
Anent the Lightweight Situation —By Pierotti



WESLEY RAMEY,
RAY BOWEN,
THE LAST OF THE FAMOUS "FIGHTING BOWEN CLAN" WHO GETS HIS BIG CHANCE TONIGHT...
BARNEY ROSS
SAYS RAMEY—"I DEFEATED CANZONERI A FEW MONTHS BEFORE ROSS, AND DID IT MORE DECISIVELY. FOR 3 YRS. BARNEY HAS BEEN PROMISING ME A SHOT—I'VE EARNED IT, AND I WANT IT..."
JEP.

National Rating Bowen's Aim Tonight

D. C. Youth Is Primed for Ramey Bout; Irving Faces Le Bonte.

WESLEY RAMEY, generally considered the leading contender for the lightweight title, may find himself shorn of all claims to the crown worn by Barney Ross after his 10-round bout with Ray Bowen, local lightweight, at Portner's tonight. Bowen, the last of the famous "Fighting Bowen Clan" fights best when the opposition is toughest—and tonight is his big chance.

That Ramey has a justifiable claim to a championship bout with Ross there is no denying. He defeated Tony Canzoneri decisively in a nontitle bout just a few months before Ross stripped the New Orleans lightweight of his championship purple. He has defeated every fighter with any pretensions to the crown at least once and there is only one thing standing between him and a chance to don the diadem—Ross himself.

Wants Shot at Title.

Of the champion's reluctance to meet him, Ramey has this to say:

"For three years, while we were both coming up, Ross kept telling me we would be foolish to fight until we both got to the top and could cash in on it big. We agreed that whichever one of us got the title would give the other a crack at it. He's been champion quite a while now, but I don't seem to be able to get a shot at him. I beat Canzoneri worse than he did, but the title wasn't at stake. Canzoneri wouldn't fight me for the championship, but he would fight Ross. Draw your own conclusions. I've earned a title shot—and I want it."

Is Ready to Do Best.

Primed, cocked, and ready to fire, Bowen appears set to turn in one of those startling good fights which have studded his ring career in the past.

In direct contrast to the main event, which is expected to develop into a boxing duel, the 6-round semifinal between Henry Irving and Sailor Le Bonte features two contestants whose sole stock in trade consists of ability to give and take. Both give with mighty swings of the right hand and both take almost anything an opponent offers. Two other sixes will offer Le Roy Dougan against Doug Swetnam and Jack Harris against Bob Lowry. A four between Jack Quigley and Wild Bill Howard will raise the curtain.

Around the Ring Selections—Ramey over Bowen, Irving to defeat La Bonte, Dougan to whip Swetnam, Lowry over Harris and Quigley to win from Howard.

Averages Vindicate Cronin

Bolton, Who Pinch-Hit Into Double Play in Fourth Game to Blast Nats' Series Hopes, Led League Emergency Batters With .588 Percentage.

ONE month to the day after his fated managerial strategy against the Giants in the fourth game of the world series brought the criticism of the baseball world down about his ears, Manager Joe Cronin of the Nats gains a large measure of vindication in the announcement by the American League of the official pinch-hitting averages.

At the top of the league's pinch hitters, far ahead of all competition, is Cliff Bolton, the rookie who failed Joe Cronin in the crucial fourth game when he hit into the double play in the eleventh inning that ended all hopes for the Nats.

Averages released yesterday show Bolton with a .588 batting average as a pinch hitter, as contrasted with the .259 pinch-hitting average of Sam Rice, who had been deemed by Cronin's critics as the logical man to be sent into the game.

Far Ahead of Kress.

With 10 hits in 17 times at bat, Bolton is far ahead of the runner-up for the honors, Red Kress, of Chicago, who finished the season with a pinch-hitting mark of .455. To Dave Harris, the Nats' perennial leader of the pinch-hitting brigade, went third honors among the emergency batsmen, with his even .400 average.

Stecher Seeking To Regain Crown

To Meet Londos if He Beats Zaharias Thursday.

The aged Joe Stecher, who meets George Zaharias in the regular Thursday night wrestling show at the Auditorium this week, was once heavyweight wrestling champion—at a time when there were only 387 contemporary "heavyweight wrestling champions." Stecher is now seeking to regain championship laurels after a Century of Progress—which finds the world with 492 current "heavyweight wrestling champion." If he can squeeze out a win over Zaharias with those powerful legs of his, Stecher will be given a chance at Jim Londos, "heavyweight wrestling champion" No. 298 at the present moment.

Zaharias is one of the most accomplished of the new school of slug, mug and hug wrestling. His footwork is a thing of beauty and a joy forever—to all but those on the receiving end. Stecher is not posted on all the latest quirks of modern rassling, but he does possess a magnificent leg scissors with which he has squeezed out more than one good win.

The semifinal finds charming Paul Boesch, the latest heart-throb among the female contingent, opposing Dick Raines, one of the better boo decoys. A 30-minute preliminary added yesterday will feature Milo Steinborn against bewhiskered and bewildered Vanka Zelesniak.

Barry and Sekyra In 10-Round Draw

District Fighter Rallies in Holyoke Bout.

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Fighting the last three rounds with a damaged right hand, Donald (Reds) Barry, Washington, D. C., heavyweight, spurted to earn a draw with Joe Sekyra, Dayton, Ohio, in the 10-round feature bout here tonight.

Because of the injury, Barry's manager announced his fighter would be unable to meet Jim Maloney, former Boston heavyweight, in a scheduled encounter at Asheville, N. C., Saturday night.

Sekyra started out at a whirlwind pace, forcing the fighting, but tired in the closing rounds. Furious exchanges in the last three chapters changed a drab match into a thriller as both tried hard to score a knockout. Neither man was able to count so much as a knock-down, however, in the toe-to-toe slugging. The roly poly Barry made capital of Sekyra's weariness to overcome the Dayton boxer's lead.

Ross to Fight Petrolle.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Barney Ross, of Chicago, lightweight champion, and Billy Petrolle, Duluth welterweight, have agreed to terms for a ten-round bout at the New York Coliseum the week of December 4.

Detroit Eleven Packs Speed And Power

C. U. to Have Battle on Hands at Stadium Saturday.

COACH "DUTCH" BERGMAN called his assistants, George Vlk and Forrest Cotton, into solemn conclave yesterday afternoon to devise a plan capable of stopping Detroit U., which will play Catholic University, come Saturday, at Griffith Stadium. For hours the trio jotted down Detroit's good points along with the bad, using several reams of paper and writing all over the athletic room's wall paper halfway down the corridor.

They emerged from the conference agreed that all the Cards need to put the skids under the visiting gents is a team that can stop a Mack truck, whip its weight in wildcats, punch its way through a brick wall and, in the meantime, find energy enough to score a couple of touchdowns. How? They haven't figured that part out yet.

Equals Titans in One Way.

Using the good old comparative records for a rule, C. U. measures up to the Titans in one way, and in another looks rather bad. For instance Dusquesne implanted its hoofprints on Detroit's collective feature a couple of weeks ago, jolting it with a 14-0 defeat, its first of the season. The same team, with exception of the quarter back, that relegated Detroit to the ranks of the vanquished, battled C. U. to a scoreless tie in a quagmire at Griffith Stadium last year.

But only last Saturday Detroit squelched Holy Cross' hopes for an undefeated season in its own backyard, unhorsing the Crusaders by a 24-0 score. Holy Cross earlier in the season kicked C. U. around the field to win a 20-7 victory.

Doug Nott, 196-pound half back, is the mainshift in Detroit's whirligig attack. He kicks, runs and passes the ball with the best of them. Twenty passes he hurled into Holy Cross territory last week, and an even dozen times scored a bull's eye. Detroit gained approximately 200 yards through the air. Most of Nott's aerials were to his running mate, Dick Lutz, an 180-pound sophomore half back, best noted for his qualities in the blocking back role.

Has Ponderous Line.

Detroit has a ponderous line, which with some of the heavier men averages over 200 pounds. Claire Hemler, a mere wisp of a lad, tips the scales at 224 pounds in a guard berth, and his mate, Emanuel Giuliani, drives the indicator around to the 210-pound notch.

Heavy work for the game begins today at Catholic U., yesterday's drill consisted largely of conditioning work. Bob McVean, reserve quarter back, probably will not play because of an injured knee. He was hobbling around on crutches yesterday. Aside from him, the team will be at its full strength for the tilt, barring more injuries, of course.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THE face of the sports map may be considerably altered before sundown today when the Nation goes to the polls in State and municipal elections, notably in New York and Pennsylvania. In Manhattan, particularly, the big shot promoters are waiting on the results with all the indifference of the Tammany tiger.

If McKee or LaGuardia wins in New York, washing Tammany out of the picture, Jimmy Johnston undoubtedly will be bounced as the promoter at Madison Square Garden. His connection with Tammany no longer will be the tie that binds Johnston to New York's choicest promotorial berth.

When, and if, Tammany goes down to defeat at the polls, Jack Dempsey is slated to be the new promoter for the Garden, and, if Dempsey goes in, our own Col. Jimmy Lake, Mayor of Ninth Street, will tag along as the man to succeed Joe Humphries as town crier at all the big fights under the Garden promotion. It's a small "woild."

Vote on 1794 Laws.

Up in Philadelphia today they will be voting on the blue laws of 1794 which have kept Sunday baseball out of the Quaker City to the great grief of Connie Mack and the Shibes who have been backed to the wall by declining gate receipts and are ready to dispose of their costly human chattels in an effort to recoup the club exchequer.

Philadelphia fans may be voting, in effect, on the sale of such as Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and Max Bishop, who are already slated to go to the Red Sox in a winter deal. Should the Sunday baseball bill pass, Mack may be inclined to cancel his negotiations and trust to the 1934 Sabbath receipts to get the club out of the red. And then again, reports of the deal for his stars may have been a well-conceived attempt to sway the voters toward repeal of the blue laws.

Should the Sunday sports bill win in Philadelphia, the first effect will be the scheduling of some choice professional football attractions in the Quaker City, now represented by a team in the National Professional Football League that is a weak sister as a result of being forced to accept the visitors' share of the gate at out-of-town Sunday games.

G. W. Made No Protest.

The Tennessee fiasco may be a closed incident with George Washington University, but all the facts have not yet been told.

George Washington, weeks before the game, was in possession of information that seriously challenged the eligibility of a raft of Tennessee players, but made no protest.

According to the information received from various sources, Tennessee coaches had most of their squad quartered at Muscle Shoals during the summer months where they practiced football assiduously under varsity mentors despite the rules prohibiting the start of practice before September 1.

Censure Unwarranted.

This department may have no keen sense of perception, but I fail to perceive how George Washington officials, who barred three star players before game time, can be censured for their action on the grounds that G. W. failed to stage a football show as advertised.

George Washington took the rap even more severely than those 25,000 who attended the game, for the Colonials were not obliged to lean over backward in the matter and risk both defeat and the success of the football program for the remainder of the season. Tennessee has stated that it was willing to compete against any team that G. W. placed on the field, and the path of least resistance would have been for the Colonials to use their ineligibles.

I vote a bit of credit to G. W. for the courage of its convictions, or something.

Winooka Favorite At Belmont Today

To Race in $2,000 Sprint; on United Hunts Card.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Winooka, winner of his last two starts in Maryland, will show metropolitan turf fans the speed that crowned him king of the Australian sprinters when he meets three other fast horses in the $2,000 International speed test, feature of the United Hunts Racing Association's one-day meeting at Belmont Park tomorrow.

The weather and track conditions today were far from ideal for Winooka's New York debut, but Michael Polson, trainer of the colt, announced the 5-year-old son of Windbag was a "sure starter." The racing strip was sloppy from a steady drizzle of the last 24 hours while the cold blasts that swept the Long Island course were more suitable to football than racing.

Regardless of the track conditions, Winooka is expected to face the starter the even money choice to whip Mrs. James M. Austin's Good Advice, John Simonetti's Sargeant Byrne and J. Simon Healy's Flying Heels. Good Advice has been defeated twice by the Australian but Sargeant Byrne and Flying Heels the former a 2-year-old, have yet to attempt to match their speed against the fast stepping invader.

Kerry Patch, Paying $4.20, Easy Victor by Length and Half in Pimlico Feature

Keep Out 2d; Swivel Far In Rear

Cutie Face Takes 4th; Aborigine Is Surprise in Sixth Race.

By Staff Correspondent.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., Nov. 6.—There was mud and more mud at the ancient Hilltop track today and some of the mud was plastered on Kerry Patch and Jockey Albert Robertson. Both were as good as new, however, the horse, after a rubdown and the rider after a bath, but most important was the fact that they combined to cause the No. 1 light to be turned on in the winner's block on the results board.

A majority of the 6,000 present stopped stamping their chilled feet and rubbing their cold hands to go down under the stands to collect a $4.20 mutuel, for Kerry Patch was no secret in the wagering. The result was a welcome relief to the favorite players, whose bank rolls had poured steadily into the totalisor for four straight races.

Keep Out Only Threat.

Aside from much determined running on the part of Keep Out, Kerry Patch had no serious rival for the purse. Robertson kept the L. Rosenberg colt under restraint to the far turn and then went out to catch Keep Out and the tiring Swivel. In the stretch, Kerry Patch had the situation well in hand. Competition was over the mile and a sixteenth course.

Afloat, a recent winner over the jumps, floated out of the flat race maiden class in the opening race under a fine ride by Lou Humphries. The daughter of Man o'War saved ground behind the pace of Accent and moved up in the streatch to win going away. Accent slopped into second money ahead of Hosain. The winning margin was four lengths and the mutuel $9.60.

A disqualification and a remarkable race by Wickliffe marked the second race. Marys May, a long shot, finished second but was thrown out of the pay-off for boring over on Bokie B. in the stretch. The latter was awarded second money with Glen Burnie moving into the third position.

Wickliffe was left at the post and trailed the field to the first turn by some 20 lengths. However, Madeley brought his mount up on the backstretch, circled the field and won by a half length. A $15.40 pay-off awaited his backers. Jockey Leishman was exonerated of blame for Marys May's foul.

Luckite, J. W. Y. Martin's son of Stefan the Great, accounted for the Glenmore Steeplechase purse with High Kilted second and Aries third in an upset finish which saw Escapade, the favorite, fourth in the five-horse field. Luckite was held far back for the first turn and then, given his head, moved to the front with a rush and coasted to the finish. Luckite's lucky followers received a $9.20 return.

When closer races are run, look to Cutie Face and Fanfern to run them. This pair jumped out of the stall gates at the 6-furlong chute and hung together for the trip with never more than a neck separating them. In the stretch drive Fanfern had her nose in front at the sixteenth pole, but Cutie Face's nose was ahead at the wire. Johnny Gilbert rode his first winner since his mishap at Laurel. The $18.40 mutuel warmed the hearts of some of the crowd.

Wacoche, easier to bet now that customers ask for numbers instead of names, won the sixth race, a 6-furlong sprint for the better juveniles. A fast-closing Zipalong was second and a tiring Believer third. Wacoche led from flag fall to finish, and among others, ran Can't Remember into the ground.

AFLOAT, saving ground in the early stages, responded willingly when put to a drive in the final five-sixteenths, came courageously under punishment when straightened into the home stretch and, under a tenacious drive, just lasted long enough. ACCENT, sent to the front when reaching the back stretch, was steadied until challenged, but weakened right at the end. HOSAIN gained readily, but was unable to threaten the first two. SHENVALEE lacked early speed and was outrun. IN INDIA and PARK could not menace the leaders. FLYALONG was done after five furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WICKCLIFFE, $15.40, $7.80, $5.80; BOKIE B., $10.60, $6.20; GLEN BURNIE, $4.20.

WICKCLIFFE, away poorly and a distant trailer for the first six furlongs, moved into contention midway of the final turn, swung to the outside of leaders and, in a fast stretch run up in the last seventy yards, was up in time to win by a half. MARY'S MAY, fast out of contention at the early entered contention while racing wide, and then held on stoutly for the final drive. BOKIE B., steadied close to the leaders weakened after drawing to the pacemakers at the stretch turn. GLEN BURNIE raced in spots. BLACK PATRICIA made a determined effort entering the front stretch, but tired badly in the final quarter mile. CANTERWOOD weakened after going in the thick of contention. STEELTON stopped almost to a walk.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming handicap. The Glenmore Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:24. Off at 2:24. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCKITE, $9.20, $4.80, $3.60; HIGH KILTED, $12.20, $4.60; ARIES, $4.20.

LUCKITE, nicely handled, was taken in hand for the first turn of the field, saved ground until last six furlongs, went up on the outside to take command at the eleventh fence and, steadied thereafters drew out at will. HIGH KILTED, a keen factor from the start, lost ground the entire trip, but held on willingly when taken up for the final drive. ARIES wore ESCAPADE down at the ninth fence, was unable to hold command, but outstayed ESCAPADE when vigorously handled approaching the finish. ESCAPADE, rushed into the lead after the second fence, began tiring in the last half and weakened steadily after landing badly at the next to last fence. SENADO went strongly for a mile and one-half.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. The Kernan. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:55½. Winner, F. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CUTIE FACE, $18.40, $9.60, $5.00; FANFERN, $7.80, $4.00; GARDEN MESSAGE, $2.80

CUTIE FACE, suited by the footing, was hurried into a brief lead at once, met persistent efforts from FANFERN and, under a tenacious drive, just lasted long enough. FANFERN, a strong factor throughout, hung after getting a brief lead inside the closing furlong. GARDEN MESSAGE closed gamely to put a pinch on the leaders after the opening furlong, went wide thereafter and closed fast. He appeared best. CRUISING finished with good energy while saving ground. STAR PORTER tired. DYAK and CLARIFY were unable to enter into contention.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; allowances. For 2 and 3 year olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:21½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KERRY PATCH, $4.20, $3.40, $2.20; KEEP OUT, $5.80, $3.00; COHORT MISS, $2.80.

KERRY PATCH, restrained until midway of the back stretch, challenged strongly when reaching the final turn, wore KEEP OUT down at the final furlong pole and came out slowly at the end. KEEP OUT, closer up than usual and going with his best, assumed a brief lead, but weakened during the closing furlong. COHORT MISS, kept in the deepest footing in the first six furlongs, came to the outside entering the home stretch and closed full of run. RED JOHN was outrun. SWIVEL was very rank in the early stages and then sulked when put to a drive.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:53½. Winner, Audley Farm's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WACOCHE, $8.60, $4.40, $3.20; ZIPALONG, $3.60, $2.60; BELIEVER, $3.60.

WACHOCHE forced a steady pace from the start, raced CANT REMEMBER into submission and then holding on gamely, just lasted to stall off ZIPALONG. Latter, favored by the early pace, improved his position gradually and came with a bold effort during the closing stages. BELIEVER, rushed hard to hold a forward position, faltered when the real issue came. CANT REMEMBER was hard urged to hold a brief lead and he tired from his early efforts. BIFF was making up ground steadily nearing the finish. PRETENTIOUS and the others were outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABORIGINE, $24.40, $8.60, $6.20; PEACE CHANCE, $3.40, $2.80; LEGIONARY, $6.60.

ABORIGINE, showing good speed at once, sprinted clear after the opening furlong, was given a mild breathing spell before reaching the home stretch and held sway when lightly shaken up. PEACE CHANCE worked his way up on the outside, but was held perfectly safe. LEGIONARY could not stay with the first two under a drive, but was best of the others. BUBBLESOME could not threaten. AU ANT STEAK, NATIONAL ANTHEM did not appear to favor the footing. BLACK BEAN was never a factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Colesville. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:52. Winner, P. BRIGHT BEAUTY, stoutly restrained while saving ground for the first six furlongs, went to the outside when drawing on even terms with MOMO, gained a slight lead in the closing furlong and stuck it out resolutely. MOMO, taken into command at once, saved a lot of ground all the way and then continued with rare courage when put to a severe drive. BRASS MONKEY reached the leaders with a bold spurt midway of the final turn, but faltered badly thereafter. FOOTSURE could not better her position when the real test came. SYRIAC began tiring after a mile. The others were outrun.

British Soccer Teams Play Here Tomorrow

A soccer team composed of members of the British ship Danea which docked at the Navy Yard yesterday will play the British United eleven tomorrow at 4 o'clock on the Monument Grounds. The ship has just returned from the West Indies, where the soccer team played several contests.

The same ship docked here several years ago and the local British divided a two-game series. The second game of the present visit will be played Sunday, also on the Monument Grounds, at 2:30 o'clock.

Maryland Faces Toughest Foe in Duke

Terps' Hopes For Victory Are Slim

Conference Title Near, Blue Devils Prepare to Avoid Upset.

MARYLAND'S squad of gridders wiped the grime of Saturday's defeat by Virginia from its saddened countenance yesterday, and plunged into the drudgery of practice, with an eye to Saturday, when Duke University will invade College Park. If Maryland ever wanted to win a game, this is the one. But if ever its chances were slim they are slim now.

Duke has bowled over V. M. I., Wake Forest, Tennessee, Davidson, Kentucky and Auburn on successive Saturdays, implanting its emblem on top of the heap that is the Southern Conference. Its chances for keeping it there are good, although North Carolina, North Carolina State and Georgia Tech stand in its way after Saturday.

One of Wade's Best.

The team is one of the best in the school's history, and one of the best Wallace Wade ever turned out. Rangy and muscular, there isn't anything Duke can't do with a football. Two of its men, Freddie Crawford, giant tackle, and Tom Rogers, end, are candidates for the All-America, not from choice, but from popular acclaim by Southern sports writers.

Crawford was all-Southern choice last fall and was named on a number of all-American second combinations. He stands 6 feet 2 inches, weighs 195 pounds and is playing his last year of football for the Blue Devils.

Rogers, another senior, is an not as heavy, weighing only 173 pounds. A demon on getting down under punts, Rogers is largely responsible for the fact that Duke's opponents boast an average less than a yard in returning punts. He also is a good pass receiver, and only last Saturday accepted one that resulted in the team's second touchdown against Auburn.

Although Duke could well afford to regard the Maryland game lightly, it happens to be a Southern Conference affair, and with the title almost within its grasp, Duke is leaving no stone unturned to assure itself of winning. Corky Cornelius, a half back, and Capt. Carl Schock, rated one of the best guards in Dixie, who were on the sidelines last week, will be back at their old posts Saturday.

Still feeling the effects of its game with Virginia, Maryland had only a light workout yesterday. Only Johnny Simpson, guard, will be missing from the starting lineup. The rest of the casualties are of a minor nature, and Webb, Buckey Buscher, Earl Widmyer and Willlis Benner, all of whom are ailing, will be available for duty.

The three Cashman brothers, David, Maurice and John, left to right, all working in the same division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, have to their collective credit a century and a half of railroading—virtually the whole time has been spent in railroading's most colorful position—as engineers. Each has been decorated by the company for 50 years' service, John and David are now retired and live at St Mary's, Pa., but the younger brother, Maurice, who is 64, is still on active duty.

The brothers were all in the Pennsylvania's Renovo division at Erie, Pa. In addition to their impressive records, the Cashman family has still other members who made railroading their careers. The father of the brothers, Michael Cashman, served the railroad for 40 years in the same division, and David's son, William, has also been with the same railroad since 1915 in the accounting department at Pittsburgh.

South Carolina and North Carolina have long disputed each other's claim as the birthplace of Andrew Jackson—and now they have settled it, each to its own satisfaction, by erecting monuments in two different places, each marking the "birthplace" of the President. Although there is only a matter of three miles distance involved in the dispute, a State line divides one group of claimants from the other—and so Jackson has two birthplaces, one in one State and one in another.

Tomorrow: The orphan of the high seas.

Kenwood Open Draws Star Amateurs

Goodman, Munger, Howell and Harper Included Among Invaders.

THE National Capital open being held Saturday and Sunday at Kenwood brings into firing position most of the big guns of national golfdom and practically all the sectional stars to climax a local season that has offered a lamentable paucity of major caliber tournament play.

Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Densmore Shute, Johnny Goodman, Horton Smith and Tommy Armour are but a few of the club swingers who will head the influx of widely prominent golfers participating in the third annual staging of this tournament.

Al Houghton, Sandy Armour, Carroll Spencer, Fred McLeod and Dave Thompson are among the local contingent who will seek to resist the assault of the outlanders.

Although generally regarded as a professional event, the National Capital open has this year attracted a large number of entries from among the leading amateurs. Jack Munger, the sensational Texas star who won his way into the semi-finals of the National amateur over a course bearing the same name—Kenwood—out in Cincinnati this year, Billy Howell, Chandler Harper and Milton J. Reach, jr., are representatives of the out-of-town simon-pures who will compete.

Many of the best local amateurs also are entered, including Roger Peacock, generally considered the outstanding amateur contender in the District; Dick Lunn, Luther Stewart, jr., and Toby Tyler.

A "Penny a Putt" tournament for women will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Washington Golf and Country Club. Members of all clubs are invited to compete. A prize for the least number of putts on 18 holes, medal play, will be awarded.

Turkey Golf Planned At Rock Creek Course

The Rock Creek golf course will fire a parting shot at the 1933 season with a turkey tournament. Two turkeys will be awarded as prizes in each flight and there will be flights for both men and women. Three flights are already entered and as many as five flights are expected to be playing for the turkeys by the time entries close Friday. The entrance fee is 50 cents.

Nick Altrock, John Connally, John Charles and Bob Leapley are strong contenders for men's honors. In the women's flights, Mrs. Danewood, Mrs. J. D. Brown and Betty Keeler loom as potential winners. The qualifying rounds will be played next Monday.

Jack Redmond to Show At Congressional Club

Jack Redmond, trick golf shot star, will open his bag of tricks at the Congressional Country Club Saturday as part of an Armistice Day celebration. Redmond has just returned from a 36,000-mile tour, during which he played on hundreds of courses in every part of the world.

At 4:30 in the afternoon Redmond will give an exhibition of "shots that seem impossible" and at 8:30 an exhibition will be given of night golf, using phosphorescent balls. The entertainment will be continued indoors with the "19th Hole Revue." The Congressional Country Club room will be decorated with night club attire for the celebration.

Emerson Will Meet Fives Eleven Today

Postponed Saturday and again yesterday, the game between Emerson and the Charlottesville Fives will be played on the Monumept Grounds today. The kick-off is slated for 3:30.

Emerson marks the third team that the Virginians have met. In an early season night attraction at Charlottesville, Central defeated the eleven, 20-0, but the Fives came back last week to drub Roosevelt, 40-0.

Zack Taylor Released.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—Zach Taylor, veteran of 13 campaigns as a backstop in the National League, today was handed his unconditional release by the Chicago Cubs. Taylor came to the Cubs in a rush deal in 1929 when Gabby Martnett's arm failed to respond to treatment and was instrumental in the championship drive. As a 10-year player, Taylor is free to dicker with whom he pleases.

The Postilion Football Contest

The Post herewith presents the third of its weekly football contests in conjunction with The Postilion, this newspaper's radio program broadcast over Station WMAL by Harris B. Hull.

Again the contest is based on 40 of next Saturday's outstanding games, selected from the schedule by Shirley L. Povich, Sports Editor of The Post, as the feature games of the week. Each fan is invited to test his own powers as a prophet or football expert by predicting the result.

The coupon below is for your convenience, although it is not necessary to use The Post chart. In the left-hand column, headed "Your Selection," fans are invited to submit their scores. On Saturday night The Postilion announcer will broadcast the results in the same order. The "Result" column provides you with a convenient form on which to record the final scores as they are broadcast.

To the fan selecting the greatest number of winning teams, The Post will award free four choice seats to the George Washington-Tulsa game at Griffith Stadium one week from Friday night.

To the fan placing second in the contest three choice seats for the game will be given. To the fans placing third, fourth, fifth and sixth will go two choice seats each.

Each fan is limited to one entry. Priority of receipts will govern in case of ties.

Radio Waves And Ripples

ANYONE really interested in N. B. C.'s new velocity microphones should go up to WRC and ask one of the engineers to explain them. That's what we did, but it didn't take.

It was as much as we could do to gather that a fellow could sit within a few feet of one of them and play a bass drum all day and not be heard, while a chap close by could make a jewsharp sound like a 10-gun salute

That's because the mikes are directional, picking up sounds in one quarter, muffling them from another. The engineer says the mikes aren't abnormally sensitive, merely selective. N. B. C. expects them to be very useful in equalizing the instruments in a band, in picking up piano duets, &c.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Father and Son Day program, speeches by Sir Willmot Lewis, Washington correspondent London Times; Dr. Phillip Fox, director Chicago Planetarium, and Dr. Alexander Klemin, New York University, and New York University Glee Club, 2:45 p. m. Blackstone Plantation, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit, singing "Ida," "Eva," "Virginia," 8 p. m.; Fire Chief, with Ed Wynn, 9:30 p. m. WMAL—Roosevelt vs. Western, high school football, 3:15 p. m.; Smith Brothers, 8:45 p. m.; Paul Whiteman's Orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WJSV—Elmer Everett Yess, another chapter in the life of a supersalesman, 8:15 p. m.; recital by Nino Martini, operatic tenor, 9:30 p. m.; Isham Jones' Orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WOL—Four Marx Brothers, electrical transcription, 11:15 a. m.; Watchtower of Scouting, Boy Scout activities put to drama, 6 p. m.; The Virginians, male quartet, 8:45 p. m.

WRC was top dog yesterday in a fight with WJSV over possession of a set of recordings of the King's Men, quartet.

It seemed until the last minute that WJSV was going to win out. It had listed the King's Men as a 7:30 show tonight and had signed up an advertiser. Then some one discovered that the recordings were in WRC's possession.

WJSV canceled the King's Men for Homer Rodeheaver, evangelist, of the Billy Sunday school (no pun). WRC scheduled them for 6:45 tonight as the Champions, having found a dealer who will pay.

Elsie Craft Hurley, N. B. C.'s Jewels-at-Eventide soprano, has about 5 minutes in which to catch a train for Baltimore, where she sings in a church following her Sunday night broadcast here. N. B. C. helps all it can by leaving the studio door open.

Horace Hunnicut, WMAL's Doctor of Blues, always wears a hat in the studio. It seems he's heard about Fairbanks, jr., Ted Lewis and Al Smith.

WJSV decided yesterday to accept a few more lady announcer applications, bringing the total now to be auditioned to 176. Three weeks will be required to hear them.

We listened to WJSV's Music Festival yesterday morning. It looked to us like a part of a gigantic plot to get a little piccolo player in every other home, at least. We liked the singing and playing, but we didn't think Mr. Zanzig should have been so explicit about building musical organizations in the home, particularly when he suggested that during the depression people who really wanted to, could get along right smartly on instruments they could make themselves in a very few minutes.

Mr. Zanzig comes back again for the Council of Social Agencies with Violinists Elsie Raner and Evelyn Scott, Violincellist Inez Beck and Cellist Mabel Duncan.

National's publicity writers have been more than normally wordy in their descriptions of how the moving into Radio City was accomplished. Impressive, however, were:

"At 6 o'clock the big trek started, and although the distance involved is only a quarter of a mile, it will take 36 hours to complete. The work will be done at night . . . to avoid congesting traffic.

"Three hundred van loads . . . largest and most complicated removal of the year, in quantity to be moved, in the technical nature of the work and because the split-second schedule which must be adhered to at all times."

National continues to fill the mails with announcements of plans for dedication of the new Radio City studios.

Sir John Reith, director general of the British Broadcasting Corporation, is coming over to take part in the dedicatory broadcast. N. B. C.'s David Saranoff, in Europe on business, will speak from London. On the entertainment program, Rudy Vallee will sing to Paul Whiteman's band, Maria Jeritza will represent opera, John McCormack the concert stage, Amos and Andy and Jane Cowl the stage. Walter Damrosch will conduct a 70-piece orchestra.

Don Bestor, Cab Calloway, Meyer Davis, Reggie Childs, Richard Himber and Xavier Cugat, bandmen, are giving a series of morning programs as a sort of tribute to N. B. C.'s seventh birthday and its occupancy of Radio City. Each will radio for half an hour from 5:30 o'clock. Bestor starts the series Monday, November 13.

Local talent, neglected for A. B. S. programs, is being hunted in earnest by WOL these days.

Already Program Director-Announcer Ted Ostenkamp has assembled several shows with which he is at least faintly pleased.

First there is Barytone Vincent Lane, with New York radio and stage experience, who manages to be different by arguing with his pianist over their song selections. Then there's "Song Garden," a gathering of popular vocals, semi-classic instrumentals and readings by Director Ostenkamp; The Virginians, a male quartet with a variety repertoire; the National Capital Female Trio, concert vocals, and Gilbert Frazier, tenor, RKO contest winner.

Each show has been given a broadcast spot. Director Ostenkamp says he's through building talents into a respectable performance, refuses to hear anything not ready for the air, except, of course, for a rough edge here and there.

A birthday party for Marie Dressler with most of Hollywood attending is scheduled for National airwaves late Thursday night. Marie will be 62. Among entertaining guests will be Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, Jimmy Durante, Marion Davies, Jean Harlow, Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore and Norma Shearer.

"Shark! Shark!" on your radio programs today means another drama . . . it features William E. Young, shark hunter, on N. B. C. at 5:15 . . . Rochester Civic Orchestra radios a full hour concert of Thomas, Mendelsshon, Weber, Bolzoni and Berlioz at 3 this afternoon . . . National has a special father and son day broadcast at 2:45 p. m. today, Dr. Alexander Klemin, New York's Guggenheim School of Aeronautics director, speaking, New York University Glee Club singing . . . a Nino Martini recital, a talk by Chicago Police Commissioner James Allman and a concert by the Howard Barlow Symphony stand out for Columbia tonight . . . Martini, on the verge of a Metropolitan debut, sings Walter Kramer's "The Last Hour," and Italian and Spanish selections . . . Allman is the next "Crime—Its Cause and Cure" speaker . . . the Barlow Orchestra will cover music history from Beethoven's "Prometheus" to the Sibelius "Valse Triste" . . .

After months of material-gathering, Myrt and Marge (above in the order named), are back on Columbia with a script series that is drawing more fan mail than many radio dramatizations. They're heard Monday to Friday, inclusive, at 7 p. m.

Walt Mason, Himself

Queen of Scots.

Biographers are always keen to write up Mary, Queen of Scots; to prove the merits of that queen, or to proclaim her record's blots. Their volumes clatter from the press and tell again the ancient tale of Mary's scrap with old Queen Bess, which ended with the block and jail. Poor Mary paced the flags of stone, for long sad years she paced the floor, and thought about the crown and throne which she had lost, to gain no more. And some biographers insist she was a martyr, good and true, while other writers wot and wist that what she got was amply due. I read the volumes thus supplied, the volumes oft unduly long, and I'm not anxious to decide on who is right, and who is wrong. Perhaps poor Mary was a saint, betrayed by servitor and tool; perhaps she had a moral taint that kept her out of Sunday school. I read the story of her woes and wring my hands in my distress; and I would like to tweak the nose of that old harridan, Queen Bess. I read the story and I wish that Mary'd been of low estate; ordained, perhaps to peddle fish, or beets and carrots from a crate. She might have lived her days in peace, if she had married some good scout, who manufactured axle grease, potato chips or pop or kraut. She had no assets left on earth when Bess had finished cutting ice, except her mighty pride of birth, and that was scarcely worth the price.

On Monday night, May 4, 1931, a new comedy in three acts and five scenes by Elmer Harris opened in the Belasco Theater. It bore the title of "A Modern Virgin" and had as its leading man Herbert Rawlinson, formerly master of ceremonies at the Palace and most recently seen on a Washington stage in Rachel Crother's comedy, "When Ladies Meet."

"A Modern Virgin" was not much of a play and even the substitution of Roger Pryor for Mr. Rawlinson after the local engagement did not serve greatly to prolong its survival in New York. It had, however, one redeeming virtue. It served to introduce to Capital audiences one of the most fascinating of the theater's younger stars in the person of Margaret Sullavan—and please set in entirely in "a's, Mr. Compositor, for reasons which will appear later.

In The Post of Tuesday, May 5, 1931, we described Miss Sullavan, in part, in these conservative and wholly inadequate words:

"—, one of the most piquant and delightful young actresses who ever found her way to Broadway from the Tidewater of Virginia.

"Miss Sullavan is a young woman of warmth and great personal beauty who imbues the role of Teddy Simpson with a freshness, a vivacity and a disarming naivete that are devastating. She is the play and all that goes to make it notable."

Her Screen Debut.

So, being apprised, like everybody else, that Miss Sullavan is to make her local screen debut in Universal's "Only Yesterday," at the Rialto Theater on Friday night of the current week, we asked her last Friday morning if she recalled her appearance at the Belasco in "A Modern Virgin."

"Of course I do," she replied with obvious enthusiasm. "You were all perfectly lovely to me—let me see, that was two years ago—and I recall that I was just a little embarrassed by the reviews because they said so much about me and so little about the play. But that was the author's fault, wasn't it? I remember that my part had 103 sides and no other role in the piece had anything like that number of pages, so naturally my part had to stand out. It really wasn't my fault."

It was suggested that we be careful not to get into any arguments so early in our conversation and inquiry was made if Miss Sullavan might be going to appear in person at the Rialto in conjunction with the showing of "Only Yesterday."

Not to Appear in Person.

"Not under any circumstances. Friends in Norfolk, where I was born you know, have asked me the same thing and I always tell them all that I wouldn't dare put in an appearance anywhere where that film is being shown. I look like a Pekingese all the way through it."

It was intimated that Miss Sullavan might be exaggerating slightly.

"No, but I do. Just exactly like a Pekingese. You see, I am supposed to be 30 or 31, or some such outlandish age, for most of the picture and to be the mother of a son 10 or 12 years old. I am having a very unhappy time of it and finally have to put on a hideous makeup and die. It's ghastly!"

"You don't care much for the pictures then?"

"Really I don't know whether I do or not. This is my first experience and certainly I can not look back upon it with any tremendous thrill. I reached Hollywood in May and underwent a period of incessant drudgery that lasted until September. I didn't meet anyone, I didn't go anywhere, I didn't do any of the things for which the film colony is supposed to be famous. I had to get up at 5:45 every morning and most of the time work until anywhere from 12 to 2 the next morning, week in and week out. I was so thoroughly disgusted with the whole business that when the picture was finished I got on a plane and started East without even stopping to remove my makeup!"

Helpful Associates.

"But there must have been something pleasant about it, since you made the picture with John Boles. John is a good friend of ours and we, here in Washington, think he's sort of a swell guy."

"You are quite right. John Boles seems to be a splendid person. But we didn't see anything of each other except when we were on the set. In the story we are kept apart for about six reels, or something like that, and really haven't a great deal to do together. They say he has a lovely voice, but we were so busy all the time he never got within gunshot of a piano."

"Then there was Billie Burke," we suggested, by this time a little timidly.

"Yes, and Miss Burke was charming. She was the most helpful of anyone to me. The first day we went on the set, I was so scared I was afraid I would not be able to do my scenes, but Miss Burke was so much more frightened than I was that I felt comparatively calm by contrast."

"Then you are not going back to make more pictures?"

Future in Doubt.

"That I don't know yet definitely, either. Contrary to popular report, I have not signed any paper, but I have more or less given my word that after 'Only Yesterday' is released I will come back, if they want me. After all, I belong to the stage, not pictures. But the most likely play in sight won't be ready until about December 1, so late that if I do go into it I shall have to give up all thought of the screen. You see, if I do more pictures, I shall have to be back in Hollywood by January 5, when I am supposed to make 'Little Man, What Now?' if anything."

This seemed like an excellent place to remark that Miss Sullavan sounded a great deal like Helen Hayes.

"Oh, you have seen her new play, 'Mary of Scotland,' haven't you? How is it; how did you like it; is it interesting; will it go on Broadway? Do tell me all about it. I've heard they are keeping it out of New York because it is awfully dull in places and drags horribly. Is that so?"

The answers to all these queries not being relevant to the matter in hand will not be gone into now, but it just goes to show! "Mary of Scotland" apparently will go into New York with two strikes already on it.

Mellow Accent Remains.

Miss Sullavan, it should be remarked in passing, contrary to further of her protestations, has not lost the delicious Southern accent that comprised so important a part of her stellar equipment. Neither has she lost the sparkle, the quick wit and the gracious bearing that so impressed her admirers two years ago.

Unfortunately, it is not possible to describe precisely how she looked. The hour of our conversation being late forenoon, it is to be surmised that she was ravishing in some sort of softly clinging negligee, although didn't she say something about having been up and about since 9 o'clock? Believe she did, come to think of it.

When the offer was made to see to it that she see whatever might creep into print as a result of this not too casual conversation, the spelling of her name seemed of paramount importance in her mind.

"Yes," we replied, "we have heard about that "a." It has probably caused more editors and printers to tear out what little remaining hair they have than any other single letter in the alphabet!"

Why the "A."

"That's too bad, but I've only lately learned to be proud of that spelling. I have always been under the impression that some illiterate ancestor merely didn't know how to spell 'Sullivan,' but out in California this summer I learned from a distant cousin that 'S-u-l-l-a-v-a-n' is the old original Gaelic spelling that has never got out of the family. And am I proud! But to think that I had to go all the way to California to find that out!"

And so, the long distance charges having by this time put what will probably amount to a permanent mortgage on Manager Rodney Collier's private phone in his office at the Rialto, we hung up.

It looks as if the telephone has come to stay!

Since the conversation sketchily recorded in the above, this column has previewed "Only Yesterday" and is in a position to be thoroughly ungentlemanly and contradict practically everything that Miss Sullavan said about herself and the picture. "Only Yesterday" is a work that reflects great credit upon its producers. Although founded on a bizarre and hardly credible premise, it unfolds a story of pathos and power that places it easily among the most impressive works of the year. Margaret Sullavan in the stellar role is superbly effective. The fact that the role is not patterned after her own youthful ebullience, gayety and humor only adds to the brilliance and poignance of her work as the young mother whose dream of a perfect love never came true. John Boles and a youngster by the name of Jimmie Butler, one of the greatest juvenile actors the screen has unearthed, contribute superlative support. "Only Yesterday" is a picture by all means to be seen.

Grace Moore Arrives Today.

By air mail from Hubert Voight, of Columbia Pictures, comes word late Monday evening reminding this department that Grace Moore, brilliant star of musical comedy, grand opera, radio and the screen, will arrive in Washington this morning to sing at the White House at the request of Mrs. Roosevelt and to participate later in the week, in events attending the launching of the Community Chest drives throughout the Nation.

Miss Moore, it may be said, has been signed to a term contract by Columbia and the search is now for her first screen vehicle under the new agreement calling for several pictures. Mr. Voight confides that present indications point to a story by S. N. Behrman, author of "Brief Moment," and Ina Claire's "Biography," with music especially composed by Rudolf Friml.

Miss Moore recently sang in the opening opera of the season in Los Angeles and has an early radio engagement in New York. It is further intimated that she may have either a concert or operatic engagement in Washington in the near future and vigorously emphasized that her motion picture contract will in no way interfere with the pursuit of her musical career independently of the films.

After a brief respite, the previews for the press got under way again this afternoon. At 2 o'clock today the ladies and gentlemen of the drama desks will contemplate the histrionic achievements of those three impeccable devotees of the fine arts, the Messrs. Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world; Max Baer, foremost contender, and William Harrison Dempsey—Jack to you—in one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's celluloid whimsies, known to the trade as "The Prize Fighter and the Lady." Myrna Loy is the lady, and somewhere in the goings-on Walter Huston, now making "Rodney" out at Fort Myer—or had you heard?—is involved. It ought to be a show!

LeGallienne Emissary.

The Drama Guild of Washington and the Pierce Hall Players will held a joint meeting in Pierce Hall, Tuesday November 14, at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Mary Ward of the Civic Repertory Theatre of New York will be the honor guest and speaker, taking for her subject "The Aims and Achievements of the Civic Repertory Theatre Relative to the Amateur Drama." Other features will be arranged for the program by the Pierce Hall Players, who are the hosts of the occassion.

The Drama Guild will open its 1933-34 season Friday and Saturday nights of the present week, November 10 and 11, with a melodrama by A. A. Milne, "The Perfect Alibi." Denis E. Connell, the chairman of the administrative council of the guild, has directed the play in which well known Washington players will take part.

And Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's arises in his place to remark that come Thanksgiving week, the attraction at his opera house will be nothing less than Katharine Hepburn's latest starring vehicle, "Little Women," adapted from the famous Louisa M. Olcott novel, famous for generations. The run will begin with a special presentation of the picture on Thanksgiving Day. Following the sensational success of "Morning Glory," "Little Women" will be awaited with particular eagerness and interest.

Delinquency Note.

Joel McCrea, motion-picture star, who has been honeymooning in the Capital this past week, did not depart from Washington by plane last week-end to resume picture-making in Hollywood, as reported. All flights having been canceled yesterday, Mr. McCrea was still in town last night, but expected to leave as soon as satisfactory plane reservations could be managed.

Quite naturally, his bride was Dee-lighted at the delay!

Dixmude Wreckage Found.

Palermo, Sicily, Nov. 6 (AP).—Fishermen reported today they had located the skeleton of the French dirigible Dixmude which disappeared on a flight to Africa in December, 1933, with 52 men aboard. The craft, the fishermen said, lies in water 130 feet deep, about 2½ miles from the town of Menfi.

Baseless Fear Refuted by Film

charming young Southern actress who made an auspicious stage debut in Washington a few seasons ago, will be seen in her first screen performance, beginning Friday night, when Universal's "Only Yesterday" will be accorded its local premiere in the Rialto Theater. Miss Sullavan confides that she is not in love with her role. Everyone else will be.

"Cut" Whisky Law Is Crime, Says Dr. Buck

Asks Imports Be Allowed to Avert Wholesaling Bad Rum Soon.

Demand that the law permitting distillers to rectify or "cut" whisky be repealed was made yesterday by Dr. F. W. Buck, executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction League.

"The greatest crime our Congress ever committed," he said, "was in passing the law permitting the right to rectify or blend whisky, in which for a given fee a distiller, wholesaler or jobber was allowed to rectify as much liquor as he could sell, using nothing but his conscience as a guide.

"One of the most successful wholesalers in the country used the constant formula of one barrel of whisky to 25 of alcohol, cut with distilled water to 110 proof. The 26 barrels were then rolled over once a day for 30 days and the product bottled.

"Pure fresh moonshine properly made from grain is no more dangerous than rectified spirits."

Dr. Buck said a short time ago there was only enough pure aged whisky in the United States to provide five ounces per capita. He suggested imports be permitted until American distillers can catch up.

Vestry Defers Naming Rector

Canons Will Have Charge of Services in Next Several Months.

The successor to the Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston, whose resignation as rector of the St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, became known Sunday, will not be chosen for several months, it was announced yesterday.

Services will be conducted by canons from the Washington Cathedral and on one Sunday Bishop James A. Freeman will preach. Dr. Johnston's resignation because of ill health and the resignation of his assistant, the Rev. Leon A. Shearer, were accepted by the vestry of the church Friday.

The Rev. Mr. Shearer resigned to enable the new rector to choose his own assistant. Dr. Johnston is now in England recuperating from a nervous breakdown. He had expected to return, but his health would not permit.

Before coming to Washington, Dr. Johnston for 13 years was rector of the Church of the Saviour in Philadelphia. A native of Scotland, he has had charges at Edinburgh and Sterling. He is a trustee of the Washington Cathedral and frequently has filled the pulpit there.

J. Harry Covington, senior warden of the church, stated: "Dr. Johnston's loss to St. John's is a rather serious one. He is without doubt one of the most brilliant clergymen in the Protestant Episcopal Church."

Others who have expressed similar views are Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, a vestryman; Col. George B. McClellan, former mayor of New York, who is junior warden, and vestrymen Duncan Phillips and Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams.

Save Arms Conference, Church Youths Urge

A resolution urging the United States to save the World Disarmament Conference and do all within its power to preserve peace was adopted by Christian Endeavor workers as they held their first fall meeting in Central Presbyterian Church last night.

The resolution will be sent to Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of War Dern. The meeting represented 2,000 District youths.

Bureau Unifies Relief Work For Transients

D. C. Operations Delayed Until Nearby States Start Programs.

Coordination of all existing transient relief facilities will be the aim of the new Transient Relief Bureau for Washington, created recently to disburse Federal relief funds, it was announced yesterday.

The organizations now taking care of transients will continue their work, but will be supervised by the Federal unit. Actual work will begin as soon as neighboring States have completed preparations for handling transients in their territory.

This delay, it was explained, is necessary to protect Washington from an influx of transients who would eventually have to be returned. Arthur Rosichan, bureau director, said rehabilitation of applicants would be governed by individual needs.

Separate Treatment.

For some applicants group lodging will be provided, while others will be given individual care. Made work will be given to all applicants to pay for their maintenance. The nature of the work has not been decided but laborers and white collar men will be separated.

More than 800 transients are now being helped by existing agencies. The new unit is prepared to provide adequate care for all applicants.

Bureau headquarters in the old Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, at John Marshall place and C street northwest, will be a central registry for all transients. Applicants will be interviewed and given immediate accommodations pending a thorough study of their needs.

Camp Plan Considered.

Applicants having no legal address may be sent to the location where they can make the best social and economic adjustment. It is expected that some will be quartered in Washington or as has been suggested, in some camp in nearby Virginia.

Local agencies will be rated on the following qualifications as to their preparedness to take care of transients: clean beds, adequate feeding, adequate toilets, showers and bath and sufficient cubic air space per individual.

The Municipal Lodging House is included in the project, but it can accommodate only 50 persons.

Death of Stuart Ruled Accidental

U. S. Forest Chief Subject to Dizzy Spells.

The death of Maj. Robert Y. Stuart, chief of the U. S. Forest Service, who plunged from a seventh floor window of an office building October 23, was declared an accident by a coroner's jury yesterday.

His widow, Mrs. Janet Wilson Stuart, and other witnesses testified he had been suffering from dizzy spells.

Maj. Stuart was 50 years old and lived at 9 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Children Calmed In Orphanage Fire

111 at St. Vincent's Quiet as Curtain Burns.

Calmed by the Sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage, 111 children stood ready to vacate the buildings yesterday when fire broke out in the recreation room, in the basement of the chapel.

Bermuda Films Included In First Post Travel Talk

The beauty and old-world charm of Bermuda will be transported to Washington tonight when a preview of motion picture films will be shown at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth and New York avenue northwest, under the auspices of the Washington Travel Guild in cooperation with The Washington Post.

Supplementing the motion pictures, James N. Findley, well-known traveler and authority on scenic attractions of the British insular possession, will deliver an interesting travelogue illustrated by color pictures on the screen.

The occasion marks the first of a series of 20 illustrated lectures on travel which have been arranged as an entertaining and educational feature by The Washington Post and the Washington Travel Guild. In this and subsequent lectures it is designed to give readers of The Post an intimate glimpse of the world's picturesque places and peoples that will be of unusual advantage in interpreting the news of the day as it appears in The Post.

By means of motion pictures, Washington residents will enjoy the thrill of a sojourn to tropical isles, modern Egypt, India, Burma and Ceylon; Ireland, Italy, Norway, France and the countries of South America. They will become acquainted with the manners and customs of other lands and gain an appreciation of their natural and man-made beauties that corresponds most closely to that which may be derived from actual visits to the scenes depicted.

Of additional interest to those who may plan tours will be the demonstrations of appropriate apparel for the various seasons that will be displayed under the direction of Miss Mary G. Whiteman, prominent Washington stylist and which will also include a showing of native costumes.

Because of the comparative nearness of Bermuda and its popularity among American travelers, it is expected that tonight's lecture will be one of the most interesting of the series. A modest charge of 25 cents is made to cover the costs of auditorium rental and incidental expenses. Tickets are obtainable at the Masonic Auditorium box office.

Doors will be open at 6:30 p. m. and the Bermuda motion pictures and travelogue will begin promptly at 8:15.

"Tribute of Seven" To Unknown Planned

The annual "Tribute of Seven" ceremonies at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier on Armistice Day is being planned under direction of Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, of the War Camp Community Service.

Water Too Cold, Tug of War Waits

Sophs, Frosh Will Stage Creek Battle Today.

Chilly waters yesterday served as an excuse for postponing "the battle of Paint Branch," at which Maryland University's freshman and sophomore classes were to settle their differences.

The battle, in the form of a tug of war, will be held today at 4:30 p. m. A rope will be stretched across the branch. Class Presidents John Jimmyer, frosh, and Gardner Brooks, soph, will be nearest the 6-foot water hole.

A state of "war" has existed between the two classes since last Monday when the freshmen bolted soph rule. Clashes between the factions have resulted in near riots, requiring police intervention.
